

Planning board vote may stop rezoning articles

It suddenly looks like a hot town meeting next Monday night in the Herbert C. Barrows Auditorium.

The Wilmington Planning Board, instead of approving two zoning changes proposed along Ballardvale Street to "Industrial" has, instead, voted for zoning changes to "Industrial Park." The action comes, to many as a complete surprise.

The Tuesday night hearing, in the public library, was a quiet one. Two attorneys, Joseph F. Courtney and Thomas Roussel, presented the facts and arguments for rezoning to industrial, with discussions of the open space, and the expected values in years to come.

They were joined by Selectman Rocco DePasquale. Mr. DePasquale told the audience that there was to be a $45,000,000 to $50,000,000 value in the properties, after they were built as had been described. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, he said, has granted approximately $900,000 for development of Ballardvale Street.

Chester Bruce, chairman of the conservation commission, was another official who spoke in favor. He described the planning for water mains and sewers, work which would be of benefit to the town, and which would be done without cost to the town.

"This particular rezoning," DePasquale said "will justify the town going back to the state to bring that development sum up to a total of $1.1 million. The money was granted when Ed King was governor, for the purpose of encouraging industry in Massachusetts."

The planning, DePasquale said, includes an elaborate traffic control signal, to be installed where Ballardvale Street and Route 125 meet.

Attorney Courtney told the hearing that the development of the area will be done by plan, but in phases. When completed there will be 750,000 to 800,000 square feet of industrial buildings, all properly designed and constructed. He estimated that less than one-quarter of the area would be in buildings. The rest would be in streets, parking spaces and grass and woodland.

Courtney was speaking for Article II, which is for an area of about 100 acres. There is a little wetlands in the area, he said, which would be cared for under the state laws.

The average size of the buildings, he said, will be determined when the site planning is started, after the rezoning.

Attorney Roussel spoke for Article Three, in which the land is 10.7 acres, owned by the Howland Development Corp. Mr. Howland, he told the hearing, had purchased the land last Friday.

The developer, he said, is in accord with the planning of the town manager. The lighting, Roussel said, will be "very sophisticated." The property will be "for the very best purpose, in Wilmington, with first quality firms and light industry."

Howland, Roussel said, owns the land. There are no options to buy. The property is beyond that of the Sons of Italy. There is one lot that is privately owned, and then Howland's land extends for 495 feet along Ballardvale Street. There is one more house lot, and after that the Wilmington Town Forest.

Industrial Park zoning

About a year ago the Town Crier publisher proposed a new type of zoning for Wilmington, that of Industrial Park.

Industrial Park zoning was to be for sophisticated research and development type of industries, in which there would be no heavy imports or exports, from the buildings. It would be used to promote the "think tank" concept in research.

Only when firms are engaged in exactly that can it be expected that banks will loan money for construction of buildings in Industrial Park zones. Other types of industry can probably expect no assistance.

The proposals of the Town Crier publisher were accepted by the planning board and its consultant, Kevin Hurley. The Industrial Park concept of zoning was voted, in the last bylaw change in town meeting, some months ago.

Planning board vote

It was like a bolt out of the blue, Tuesday night, when the planning board turned down the proposal for Industrial zoning and instead voted for an Industrial Park zoning.

Tony Gentile, planning board member, made a motion after the hearing was concluded, to approve of an industrial rezoning change. It was voted down, three to one. (There are, at this time, only four members on the board).

Carole Hamilton then proposed an Industrial Park rezoning. That was voted favorably, three to one. Mr. Gentile was the only person to vote no.

The vote of the planning board, if sustained by the town meeting, will probably leave the two proposals without the financial backing needed to carry forward their work. Banks do not loan money if a project is to be described as "iffy."

Housing proposal

The Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) has hopes of solving the lack of housing for the elderly and others, in Wilmington, this year. The authority met Monday night with Rep. Jim Miceli, to confer on the possibility of getting state funds for that purpose.

Senate Bill 2034, being submitted for consideration this year, proposes a total of $186.6 million for public housing, to be available to local housing authorities. It was portions of that hoped for money which was discussed.

In the proposal $66.6 million is to be used for the construction of elderly housing (Chapter 667); $40,000,000 for family housing (Chapter 705) and $15,000,000 for the construction of handicapped housing (Chapter 689).

The town meeting last spring voted approval for the WHA to utilize the Buzzell School for elderly housing. There is also the proposal for a sewer to be constructed on Cedar Street to the present old age housing, which would allow more apartments to be constructed.

Rezoning proposal

This aerial photo shows the area proposed for rezoning to industrial, in one of two zoning articles to be voted on by the special town meeting Monday night. The Tambone Corporation is proposing to build a high-tech industrial park of 80 acres in the area bounded in white. Another industrial proposal is also in the warrant, proposed by the Howland Development Corp. for ten acres of land just north (above) the Sons of Italy property.

Gibbs gets gas license, but town gets its way

The Gibbs self-service gas station in Wilmington has 60 days to convert to so-called "split-island" service.

Gibbs was granted a license by the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night, but only under the condition that they conform to gas station regulations adopted by the town in March 1982. Those regulations do not allow self-service stations.

Attorney Joseph Courtney appeared before the board Monday night with Gibbs representative Robert Morris in the latest chapter of a battle that has lasted for several years. Courtney argued that since Gibbs' conversion to self-service occurred prior to the town's adopting of the gas station regulations, the use was "grandfathered."

The case began several years ago when Gibbs went before the board of appeals to make changes on the gas station, changes which would require a variance, and which would convert the station to self-service. The board of appeals denied the variance. Gibbs took the case to court. The court ruled that the board of appeals should hear the case again. This time, the board ruled in favor of the variance.

At that point, in late 1981, Gibbs began the conversion, and the selectmen began trying to figure out how they could stop the conversion. Two other stations in town also made changes in their pump arrangements, but went to the "split island" service, where one set of pumps is self-service, and another is full service.

One of those stations, North Wilmington Shell, is owned by Robert Doucette, who was elected as a selectman in April. He abstained on the Gibbs case.

After the selectmen adopted gas station regulations in March this year, prohibiting stations that are strictly self-service, the Gibbs license was not renewed. The selectmen held a hearing on the case in June, but action on the matter was put off.

Monday night, after listening to Courtney and Morris, the selectmen asked Town Counsel Aian Altman what they thought. Altman said that he thought the town had a good case.

On a motion by Rocco DePasquale, the selectmen voted four to zero to deny Gibbs a license. The move left people wondering what would come next.

The selectmen called a brief executive session, to discuss "pending litigation." When they came out of executive session, DePasquale asked that his motion be reconsidered.

He then made a second motion, to grant Gibbs a license subject to the gas station regulations of the town, with a certificate of compliance to be filed by November 14. The motion passed four to zero.

A message to Wilmington voters Attend Town Meeting next Monday

The town meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Herbert C. Barrows Auditorium on the high school. There will be three articles.

The first is of a bookkeeping nature. It is to distribute state and other money into various accounts. This will be the last action on which the town meeting will vote before the establishment of the new rate.

The second and third articles ask to rezone two parcels of land along Ballardvale Street. In a sense, the action of the town meeting will do much to determine the tax rate of next year.

Your presence will be appreciated.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served, after the town meeting

Sharon Landry is bride of Scott Perry

Sharon Louise Landry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Landry of Andover Street, Wilmington, became the bride of A. Scott Perry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Devine of Valley Road, Tewksbury, Saturday, May 7.

The Rev. Richard Grimes performed the ceremony before the flower-decked altar of The Assembly of God Calvary Temple, Lynnfield.

Carolyn Landry of Andover, N.J., sister-in-law of the bride enhanced the ceremony with her rendition of Lord's Prayer and The Wedding Song.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a full length gown of white organza with a bodice covered on alencon lace and seed pearls. The gown also featured a Queen Ann neckline, bishop sleeves and two rows of chantilly lace at the bottom, ending in a cathedral train. Her double tiered veil trimmed in matching alencon lace, fell from a cap of matching lace. She carried a cascade of white roses, daisies, blue rose buds in silk.

Carolyn Keating of Chester, New Jersey served her sister as matron of honor in a royal blue pleated gown with lace overblouse. She carried a spray of light blue roses and cascading blue and white ribbons.

The bride's attendants included Dawn Perry of Tewksbury, sister of the groom, Paige DeCosta, Donna Patterson and Pamela MacTeague. They wore gowns of light blue, styled like that worn by the matron of honor and carried matching blue and white sprays with flowing dark blue ribbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Perry

Steven Perry, brother of the groom served as best man while ushering duties were in charge of Henry Landry of Andover, N.J. brother of the bride; David and Henry Perry of Tewksbury.

brothers of the groom and Michael Beaulieu of Tewksbury.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at K of C Hall, Tewksbury where Claudette Perry of Dracut, sister-in-law of the groom circulated the guest book.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Landry chose an aqua chiffon full length gown with a corsage of white roses.

The mother of the groom was attired in a baby blue full length pleated gown with a corsage of white roses.

Following a wedding trip through the White Mountains, the couple is now living in Allentown, N.H.

The new Mrs. Perry graduated from Wilmington High School with the class of 1979 and is now employed by Mitre Corp, Bedford. Her husband was educated in Tewksbury and is currently a police officer for Middlesex Community College, Bedford.

Plans include a series of six speakers who will discuss various aspects of raising children, focusing on the parents' expectations and reactions to the challenges of the adolescent years. The first speaker, director Armand Henault of the Burlington Community Life Center, has selected the topic, "Forming Identity." He will trace the developmental stages from infancy as the normal child forms his or her individual identity through interactions with parents and friends.

THOSE SIX YEAR MOLARS

If you have a youngster who's past his sixth birthday, it won't surprise you when he begins to lose his front teeth. But a lot more is happening in his mouth than you realize. For one thing, his six-year molars are beginning to erupt. These are the big back teeth so important for chewing and maintaining proper teeth and jaw relationship. Some people may think they are "primary" molars to be replaced later like the child's other "baby" teeth, but they're not. They're permanent teeth, and with proper care, should last a lifetime.

The condition and shape they're in when they erupt are especially important and should be checked carefully. Among other things, these six-year molars help determine the shape of the lower part of his face. They can also have a direct effect of the position and health of his other teeth.

If they come in crooked, for example, this can throw his other teeth out of alignment. This not only affects his chewing efficiency but the shape of his mouth and tendency toward tooth decay.

Two escape serious injury in Maine accident

Two young women from Wilmington escaped serious injury in an accident in Maine last week.

Karen Carlson, 18, of Andover Street and Lee Ann Lopez, 17, of Chestnut Street both sustained minor injuries when Carlson's pickup truck overturned on the Exit 9 spur of the Maine Turnpike in Falmouth. The accident occurred at 6:20 p.m. Tuesday, when the pickup blew a tire.

After hitting a guardrail on a bridge, the truck rolled over.

The pair were taken to the Maine Medical Center, where it was determined that Karen Carlson had sustained a hairline stabilization fracture of the sixth and seventh vertebrae. The fracture, though, was not serious enough to require hospitalization. She is recovering at home. Lee Ann Lopez was also released after treatment for minor injuries.

Police training has taken a giant step forward with the opening of an in-service training institute in Tewksbury.

High-ranking police officials and other dignitaries were on hand Thursday morning for the dedication of the Northeast Regional Police Institute, on the Tewksbury Hospital grounds.

The institute will provide training to keep police up-to-date on matters of law and police work. Officers will attend one-week sessions over a 30-week annual program.

Located in an old building which once housed mental patients at the hospital, the institute represents a grass-roots effort on the part of area police officials. Capt. Emile Steele of the Billerica Police Dept. is credited as the founder of the institute. Organizational meetings were held for many months at the Billerica Elks.

"The locals did it all!" said Sen. Patricia McGovern. Speaking at the dedication, she said that she had attended one of the meetings at the Billerica Elks and was thoroughly impressed with the organizational effort. She said that while she was pleased to provide state support, including an initial appropriation of $15,000 for the institute, the credit must go to the locals. "They did it themselves."

Some of the work involved was quite dirty. The building had been closed for many years, and was used for storage of civil defense equipment. Before that, the building had housed mental patients for many years.

The work of cleaning, repairing and painting the building was carried out by police officials and volunteers. One visitor to the building during the cleanup asked Bob LaRivee if the men doing the cleanup were officers. LaRivee replied that he was the lowest-rank man present, and he is an acting lieutenant. Paul Sullivan, chairman of the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen, also helped.

The only patrolman on the board of directors is William Latta of Tewksbury. He was assigned to the job of spearheading the preparation of the building by Tewksbury Chief John Sullivan. Other men who worked with him on the job credit him with bringing out the possibilities of what could be done with the building.

The upper floors of the building remain in an unrestored condition, serving as a before - and - after comparison. Heavy wooden doors with small peep-holes, and iron-grate windows serve as a reminder of generations of patients.

The men involved in the cleanup, though, say that the first floor was in worse condition than the others.

"If any of you people had seen the condition of this building two months ago, you would not have believed it," said Thomas Saunders, superintendent of Tewksbury Hospital.

The first floor now gleams with new paint, and a large room at the end of the building has been prepared as a classroom. Rep. Jim Miceli said that work is needed on the building's heating system.

Master of ceremonies for the ceremony was Wilmington Deputy Police Chief Bernard Nally, who also serves on the board of directors.

Other local men on the board of directors are Lt. John Mackey and Officer William Latta of the Tewksbury Police Dept. Andover Police Capt. Lloyd Belbin, a Wilmington native, also serves as secretary of the board.

Director of the institute is Andover Police Chief James F. Johnson.

The institute will provide on-going training for officers, which is required by law but has been unavailable in the past. The program is expected to train about 900 men from 17 police departments the first year. Later, as more space and instructors become available, training will be opened up to more men.

Ranking police officials are studying at the institute during its initial week, to evaluate the programs. As they return to their departments, they will be able to brief their subordinates on what to expect.

The curriculum will provide officers with up-to-date information on new laws, recent court cases, and investigative procedures. Other courses will include firearms, first aid, officer survival and accident investigation.

Dedication

Father Joseph Blaney, O.M.I., gave the invocation at the dedication of the police training institute.

Permit sought for second phase of condos

With phase one units nearly sold out, developers of the Indian Ridge condominiums off Shawsheen St., Tewksbury submitted to the planning board Monday an application for a special permit to allow phase two of the multi phase project to get underway. The planning board has set up a public hearing on that application for October 5 at 7:00 p.m.

And while before the board the developers took the time to give an update on how the project is going, Mickey Sullivan, who is partner with his brother Timothy in the venture, did most of the reporting.

Sixty units have been constructed during the past few months, all a part of what was the first phase. Sales, Mickey said, are picking up with most of the units sold being single bedroom units.

There are very few children in the development, he said. Spread out among the 60 units are four school age children and two infants.

The Sullivan brothers, who under current zoning bylaws can build a total of 300 units on the 50 acre parcel, are planning more phases like the first one. Under discussion currently is about 150 units, which will probably be presented in smaller phases of 60 units. There is a total of 240 units still on the drawing board.

Mickey also told the board that about $120,000, or more, is being set aside by the developers for the planned construction of a recreation room, which will be available to all condominium owners. The cost is being estimated at $40 a square foot. Construction is being planned for next spring and Mickey characterized it as a "nice place for a meeting."

There will be no swimming pool, either inside or out, the planning board was told. There will be a tennis court, which is being planned for the project by a "tennis pro." The court costs are over the planned budget by about $7,000 to $8,000.

Under the town zoning bylaw covering development of multi family dwelling districts, the developer must spend no less than $500 per unit to provide recreational facilities on the site. For the Indian Ridge development, that would put the cost of recreational facilities at a total of about $150,000.

St. Augustine's parents win compromise busing plan

by Jim Brown
Tewksbury Editor

A compromise bus routing plan, won last Wednesday by parents of Andover's St. Augustine's elementary school students went into effect Monday, according to Assistant Superintendent for Business John Ryan. The new route, which vastly differs from the one Tewksbury schools were planning to run for the September 12 opening session of the private school, will use two of the system's 11 private school buses after they complete their primary routes, entails a total of eight stops and will be in effect for at least the first 10 days of school.

After hearing the displeasure of parents with the original plan to use the St. William's School parking lot as a central pickup and dropoff point, the school committee voted 4-0 Wednesday, with Carol Wareing absent, to scrap that and try out the new plan at no additional cost to the town for a two week period.

The 25 to 30 parents attending last Wednesday's meeting argued that the plan calling for students to be brought to the St. William's School in the morning and picked up there at night would place an undue burden on the majority of them. The parents also argued that they were under the impression that a March 23, 1983 school committee vote to grant the use of a publically supported bus for the St. Augustine's students meant that one of the system's fleet of 11 private school buses would be used exclusively for them.

However, the committee and Ryan pointed out that St. Augustine's starting and closing times do not coincide with that of the 18 other private schools that receive bus service. St. Augustine's, Ryan said, starts and ends their school day about 30 to 45 minutes before the other schools.

Because of that starting time, Ryan said the committee okayed the idea of a central pickup and dropoff point in order to accommodate the St. Augustine's students. Under that plan, one of the 11 private school buses would have gone to the St. William's School parking lot after completing its route in the morning and a bus dropping other private school students off near the Andover town line would have gone to St. Augustine's to pick up those students and return them to St. William's where parents would be waiting to pick them up for the trip home.

That plan would have meant some parents going to St. William's would travel a distance equal to that of going directly to the Andover school.

Ryan told the parents that plan was adopted because St. Augustine's students would have gotten to Andover one hour before school opened if they were picked up along with the 570 other private school students in the morning and because those same 570 students would have had to wait around for a half hour in the afternoon before the 68 St. Augustine's students returned from school.

Some parents argued that because both parents work, they would have to drop their children off at St. William's a half hour before the bus arrived in the morning and pick them up a half hour after the bus arrived in the afternoon.

However, Ryan said he "didn't have too many options" when St. Augustine's is getting out at 3 p.m. and everyone else is getting out between 2:15 and 2:30. He said it would be unfair to hold the 570 other private school children in the St. William's parking lot during the afternoon for the St. Augustine's children to arrive.

"We thought we were going to have our own bus for our own kids," said one parent. Another parent asked why the committee could not assign a bus to go through the town to pick up St. Augustine's students on an exclusive basis.

Currently, the 11 private school buses run morning routes across town to pick up the 570 students at designated stops and take them to the Center School parking lot where they regroup to other buses that go to their private school. The order is reversed for the afternoon trip with the St. William's School parking lot as the regrouping center.

One parent said that the schools could designate one bus for St. Augustine's students exclusively, after she said she conferred with bus contractor Alvin French. She said French told her it would take about one and a half hours to pick up the students and take them to the school, a trip that would see the first students picked up in the morning dropped off last in the afternoon and would mean some students would stay on the bus for three hours daily.

"Our 11 routes are stretched right now," Ryan said. "To have one bus go around and pick up students around this town, it would have to start at 6:30 in the morning," he added.

Ryan said that the idea probably wouldn't work. Students spending three hours a day on a bus is something he and committee member Louis Carciofi said would devastate some of the younger students.

Ryan agreed that it would take "every bit of that (one and a half hours) or longer" to complete a route serving only St. Augustine's students. "There's no easy way to do this," Ryan said. "If you were on an 8 to 2 system, you wouldn't be here tonight."

St. Augustine's adopted that 9 to 3 schedule in deference to Andover students who attend the school. Andover's public system runs on a 9 to 3 schedule and since the vast majority of the school's enrollment comes from that town, St. Augustine's had to adopt it as well.

The Town of Andover supplies a publically funded school bus for the students in that town who attend St. Augustine's, a practice apparently in compliance with a state law that mandates towns to transport students to private schools within their borders if they also transport public students.

Ryan also said that St. Augustine's would not be able to supervise a bus load of children arriving there an hour before school. He said, as did Brother Thomas Schady, the school principal, that it would be difficult to bring in teachers for supervision purposes an hour before school starts.

The St. William's central pickup and dropoff spot was chosen, Ryan said, because that school is located in the center of town and would make an equal distance for all parents to travel.

But when some parents provided a map showing where all St. Augustine's students live was presented to the committee, it was noticed that there are several "clusters" of students which would make it easy to pinpoint the location of several stops.

Committeeman Jim Sullivan, who made the motion for the trial period route system, said that the committee is being held in check by budget constraints and the Andover time schedule. He said that the vote to okay use of a publically supported bus for the school was approved last March only if there would be no cost to the town. "The budget constraints as well as the 9 to 3 is what got us into this problem," he said.

The idea of expanded stops seemed to gather support as the meeting wore on. The idea, said Charles Cappola, has "got to be better than the other two alternatives we're looking at."

The new route was devised after Ryan met Thursday, September 8 with Br. Schady, and two St. Augustine's School parents. Ryan said the parents seemed in agreement with the eight stops that were picked and that the route will be closely monitored for the first 10 school days. One of the routes will start at Whipple and Rogers and proceed to St. William's. It will then stop to the rear of the Oaks Restaurant and proceed to Vale at Braford and then express to Andover.

The other route starts at the Mill Hill Garden Center on River Road and proceeds to Kendall and Lancaster. It then stops at Martha and Starr and proceeds to Leston and Carter and then express to Andover.

The routes reverse in the afternoon.

The committee will hear a report on the operation of the system and decide whether it will continue at their September 21 meeting.

One major consideration in whether the two bus system will continue is the monetary factor. According to Ryan the system is still compiling the number of miles all private school buses are travelling. That number plays an important part in the cost of providing transportation.

Under the contract Blanchard Charter Service has with the school committee, one flat rate covers a total of 605 miles travelled per day for all 11 buses. Anything over that total, expressed as aggregate miles, will cost the school committee $1 per mile.

Ryan said the total mileage clock starts ticking once the bus leaves the barn in the morning and does not stop until the bus reaches the barn at the end of the day. It is not known at this time whether the committee is close to reaching the 605 total aggregate miles.

"We're still changing routes," Ryan said. "It will take about a week to iron it out," he added. But, he said, "They're (two buses making a second run) not costing the school department anything at this point in time."

Cancer Control Society holds regular workshops

Chronic disease support workshops will be held each week on Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 10 at the Cancer Control Society (CCS) facility 185 Taft Rd., Wilmington.

Safe optional therapies which are available at low cost will be discussed. Pros and cons of surgery, chemotherapy and radiation as well as patients rights and freedom of choice in choosing treatment based on all available information will be explained and debated.

Phone calls to healed patients, indoor growing of organic food and sprouts with delicious recipes will be part of the program. Also available are suggested nutrition and cleansing programs used by the major holistic doctors, hospitals and clinics both here and in other countries.

The CCS does not accept the term incurable and works to help rejuvenate the patient's will to live. This learn by doing workshop explains the importance of giving maximum support to the body's own healing mechanisms, both mentally and physically. Thousands have allegedly been healed by using natural therapies which rebuild the immune system and literally drive diseases from the body. Often even hopeless cases can get much needed support from an understanding group of peers.

This series of workshops is offered free to patients, friends and relatives who may not know where to turn for information which is often hard to find. Many workshops tend to prepare the patients for death, while we would rather work toward living and fulfilling one's purpose for being, states CCS staff.

Persons seeking further information on workshops, cancer legislation, volunteer opportunities or making donations are requested to call the Cancer Control 24 hour hotline at 657-8131.

Police obtained a search warrant after Jepson saw the plants from the street.

obituary

Family learns of 1982 death of Joseph J. Leathers

A memorial mass will be held on Saturday for a Wilmington man whose family just learned of his death 18 months ago in California.

Joseph J. Leathers, 30, was shot while working at a carnival in Pomona, Cal. on March 12, 1982. His parents only learned of his death on Friday.

Warren and Annette Leathers of Glen Road had not heard from their son, and had attempted to learn of his whereabouts through a missing persons search. Police, however, told them that due to the large number of runaways, the search would only be conducted if there was a warrant for his arrest.

The family learned of the death only when Mrs. Leathers' brother read of the case in the newspaper. Reportedly, Joseph Leathers had a driver's license on his person, giving his Wilmington address.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Warren V. of Billerica and Mark R. of Wilmington, a nephew Justin, and his maternal grandparents, Yvonne Authier of Brockton and Joseph Authier of Hyannis.

He was a member of the Class of 1972 of Wilmington High School.

A memorial mass will be held for him on Saturday, Sept. 17 at 9:00 a.m. in St. Dorothy's Church.

The day's events begin with the alumni, faculty, student, family road race over the school's cross country course. Prizes will be awarded in a number of categories. The races are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. At 10:30 a.m. the first varsity-alumni soccer game will take place at the school's varsity field. Also at 10:30, a tennis tournament, limited to 16 doubles teams, will be held at the school's tennis facility. Teams may be made up of students, parents, faculty and alumni. At 12 p.m. the second alumni baseball game will be held at the school baseball diamond, with the younger alumni challenging the veterans of earlier years.

The varsity football game will be the featured contest of the day, the first game for the new Cougars under the direction of first year varsity coach Bob Pike. Last year the Cougars lost a tough game at West Roxbury, when they played a scoreless first half and dropped a 13-8 decision.

Food and drinks will be sold throughout the day by the Athletic Association.

Family mass will be celebrated at 4 p.m. in the chapel for all those who are participating in the day's activities.

Any alumni who wish to participate in any of the day's activities are asked to call the school (944-4900) and leave their names with Athletic Director Paul Downey as soon as possible.

Young Redmen set for on the job training

The 1983 Tewksbury varsity soccer team swings into its eighth season this week, hosting Lawrence High School at the Tewksbury Junior High soccer facility. The Merrimack Valley Conference soccer crown will be up for grabs, with Billerica, Methuen, Andover and possible Greater Lawrence Regional High Schools considered the top contenders.

The Tewksbury Redmen, after a 1982 Cinderella season during which they just lost out to Andover for the MVC championship, but still clawed their way to the Division II North title, find themselves in a rebuilding year. With eight seniors, seven juniors, three sophomores, one freshman and only five returning players, one of which was a starter, the Redmen will have to hope for great leadership from the seniors to carry this young team in the competitive MVC.

Captains for this year's team include Patrick Sands, a starting fullback from last year's team, and Dana Tower, a midfield reserve on the 1982 championship team. Other seniors include Mark Stemmler, William Deppe and Tim Kelly, all members of last year's varsity, as well as former junior varsity players Steven Flaherty, David Crowley and walk-on Peter Vultaggio.

The only returning junior will be Scott Thornton. Other juniors include Jim Field, Kenny Krugh, David Flanagan, Kevin Polleck, Paul McSweeney and Peter Kushnieruk. The five sophomores include Ricky Heartquist, Nario Simao, Keith Tower, Marc Masone and Jonathan McLeod. The only freshman to make the team is Ed Sipowicz. Juniors Mark Donovan, recovering from a pre-season injury, and transfer Darrell Favreau, who will not be eligible until October 29, will also be working with the varsity team.

In an effort to maintain a solid competitive team from year to year, the coaching staff has decided to go with an all freshman and sophomore junior varsity team, which will open its season Saturday, traveling with the varsity team for a 10:30 a.m. match against the Rangers of Methuen.

The Tewksbury defense, this year will be backboned by senior captains Sands and Tower. The strong leg of Billy Deppe will also be a key to clear the team from defensive trouble.

In net will be Ricky Heartquist, who recently completed a successful venture as goalkeeper on the gold medal winning Northeast Team in the Bay State Olympics. His backup will be surprising Jonathan McLeod, who will see net duty on both the junior and varsity teams this fall.

Pat Sands, probably the best conditioned athlete on the field, will find himself playing not only any of the fullback positions, but also the midfield area. Dana Tower will be the team's main man in the center of the field and will be called upon for forward line support. Paul McSweeney and Keith Tower will add depth to the fullback contingent. The midfield area will be filled by a variety of players who will also find themselves playing on the forward line.

Scott Thornton and David Flanagan have both the skill and intelligence that go along with the position, with seniors Dave Crowley, Steven Flaherty combining both those qualities along with experience. Sophomores Marc Masone and Nario Simao, along with freshman Ed Sipowicz, will find themselves in numerable positions as all three are not only keys for this season, but the future.

Simao has great skill, Masone with a knack for getting to the ball as a defender, and Sipowicz the ability to produce at any position he is asked to play.

Jimmy Field and Mark Stemmler are two of the keys to this year's offense. Field is a hard person to mark, and should be a definite goal scorer, while Stemmler, along with good speed, has the knack and the leg to score from 30-35 yards out.

Seniors Peter Vultaggio and Timmy Kelly will introduce good left-footed shots on the offensive end of the spectrum, while vastly improved former junior varsity players Kevin Polleck and David Flanagan will bring a great sense of control to the midfield and forward line this year, as both are patient with the ball and intelligent passers. Pete Kushnieruk adds good speed to the offense.

The next home game will be played September 20, with the varsity hosting Greater Lawrence Regional at Tewksbury Junior High School field, and the JV's playing their Greater Lawrence counterparts at Tewksbury High School. Greater Lawrence features Betinho Moniz, who following his senior year has a good shot at playing soccer for the New York Arrows of the Professional Major Indoor Soccer League.

Scanlon returns to lead Curry

The 1983 men's varsity soccer team at Curry College will open a 16-game schedule Thursday, Sept. 15 at home against Fitchburg State College. The Colonels will be out to better their 1982 record of 9-7, the most victories recorded in the brief history of the varsity sport at Curry.

Meanwhile, the varsity women booters, who lost 14 games last year, are looking for better things this season. They open at home Wednesday, Sept. 14 against Babson College. Both the men's and women's home openers begin at 3:30 p.m.

Men's head coach Jim Kaufman is pleased that the two top scorers from the 1982 team, Steve Scanlon, 6-4, 200 pound striker back from Wilmington, and Bob Limer, a striker from Methuen, have both returned. Scanlon set new Curry records for total points (25) and total assists (9) last year, while Lima registered six goals and seven assists.

Kaufman also has several other key players back, including junior goalkeeper Reggie Lockwood from Pride's Crossing, sweeper Mark Sullivan of Marshfield, midfielders Artie Tefft of Warwick, R.I., Victor Manganiello of Malden and forward Scott Buchanan of Newton. Junior halfback Paul Radley of Braintree, who had a fine freshman season, but was lost to the team due to injury last year, is also back.

Coach Kaufman is reluctant to make any predictions about 1983. "Losses from graduation and the addition of some strong new opponents to our schedule make the outlook for the season ahead very uncertain," he says.

Wilmington Pop Warner

Chargers open home season

The Wilmington Chargers traveling teams will host the Lowell Warriors in their home opener Sunday, Sept. 18, at the Wilmington High School field as the Pop Warner season enters its second week of Merrimack Valley Conference action.

The A's dropped a hard fought 6-0 decision to the Dracut Middies Sunday afternoon in the season opener for both teams at Dracut High School field.

The two teams were last year's top finishers in the MVC B Division, as Dracut copped the crown, with Wilmington a close runner-up second place finisher for 1982.

This year's A team entries had difficulty moving the ball against each other in a turnover plagued contest, as the defense for both squads forced fumbles and interceptions to halt all but one drive that resulted in a late second quarter score for the Middies.

In the B contest, the Chargers dropped an 18-0 decision, while the Middie C's topped the Chargers, 20-0.

Wilmington Pop Warner is still accepting registrations for boys at all levels of play, from eight to 14 years of age, and especially boys at the D, C and B levels of play. For further information, all interested boys should contact Pop Warner President Len Howard, 658-9824, or treasurer Linda Calandrello, 657-7010, regarding the Pop Warner program for the 1983 season.

Reading firm low bidder on water main contract

All bidders have to have a "minority" firm as a part of the contract, and prior to the execution of the contract. The Shaw firm, if it receives the contract, will not have to do this. It is already qualified, so the commissioners were told, as a minority contractor. It is at this time engaged in the construction of a 12 inch water main in Reading. Shaw is a sub-contractor on the job, the total costs being $300,000. The job started in May and is to be completed in September.

Shaw, with no bond, submitted prices of $276,546.50 for the water mains and $305,396.50 for the water mains plus street surfacing.

Third was the J. D'Amico Inc. firm of Randolph, with prices of $309,856.76 and $317,727.76. Fourth was P. Caliacco Corp. of Quincy with prices of $309,856.76 and $306,006.76.

The high bid was $309,483.73 and $375,283.76.

George Allan, chairman of the sewer and water commissioners believes that the work will be started before October first. He characterized the effect of the costs upon the water rates of Wilmington as being "peanuts" because of the low prices.

Chamber of commerce opposes new bridge

The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce is not in favor of rebuilding the Woburn Street bridge. So the directors of the chamber decided after discussion on September 13.

The people on Woburn Street, the chamber directors felt, would be unhappy at the influx of automobiles from the industrial district of Woburn if the bridge were to be rebuilt. An opening from the industrial Contractors were "hungry" on September 8 when one dozen firms submitted bids for construction of new six - inch water mains in the Hathaway Acres and Gowing Road areas of Wilmington. Two more firms arrived late and were excluded from the bidding process.

Many of the prices bid were below the expected price of $360,000. Resurfacing of streets was a second separate part of the bid process.

Shaw Mechanical Contractors of Reading submitted the apparent low bid of $276,546.50 and $305,396.50 for the job plus the repaving of the streets. Their bid was protested. They had no performance bond as a part of the bid. The protest was entered by the firm of P. Caliacco Corp. of Quincy, the apparent fourth lowest bidder, with prices of $309,856.76 and $306,006.76. The second bid, to complete the paving for this firm was lower than the first bid.

The Shaw firm did submit a letter on the bonding. The letter, from an insurance agency, advised that a bond which would conform to the specifications would be ready the next morning.

district of Woburn directly to Route 93 would be better, the chamber decided.

A chamber policy was established in which nothing should be done on this subject until after the new Route 129 route has finally been established. It was voted to notify the Massachusetts DPW that the Wilmington Chamber opposes the construction of a bridge between Woburn and Wilmington at Woburn Street.

Electric rate study to continue

The electric light rate study in Wilmington, by the Chamber of Commerce will continue, the board of directors of the chamber voted on Sept. 13.

The town manager, selectmen Bob Cain and Bob Doucette, and chamber representatives Michael White of Sweetheart Plastics and Bob Atkinson of Compugraphic, together with chamber President Nicki Johnson and Executive Director Joan O'Rourke met with the Reading Municipal Light Board, August 29.

The delegation was advised that they were welcome to meet with the management of Reading Light and obtain information they needed, but that the light board is under no obligation to negotiate with municipalities.

Reading Light is allowed an eight percent profit on prime cost of plant, by the State Department of Public Utilities. Of this amount four percent is disbursed to the town of Reading, and the remaining four percent is divided into the communities of Lynnfield Center, North Reading and Wilmington, as a voluntary payment. It is possible that this voluntary payment may not be forthcoming in the future.

The selectmen and chamber representatives were told that, contrary to the usual approach of apportioning the increases percentage-wise, Boston Edison, which sells to Reading Light, increased costs by the straight line method. It was, in other words, simply passed along.

250th anniversary service at Wilmington Congregational Church

An anniversary service is planned for Sunday, Oct. 23 at the Wilmington Congregational Church, honoring the church's 250th anniversary. The service will be the highlight of a celebration that has extended over several months.

The anniversary celebration has included suppers, ham and bean as well as Italian cuisine, an international breakfast, snow sculpture, a balloon launch, and a very successful crafts fair and luncheon.

In the next few weeks, tickets will be on sale for a gala banquet to be held on the eve of the 250th

The notice came to them during the third week in December and Reading Light posted notice by an advertisement in the Town Crier on Dec. 29, effective January first. They also included a notice in the billing to all customers in January.

The chamber directors voted that a study of electric light increases, not counting fuel costs, be instituted by the chamber. The costs are increasing, it is felt, in homes as well as in business firms. It was felt that there should be documentation on which to base arguments.

Because of the number of homes in Wilmington (about 5,000) it was felt that there would be too much difficulty in compiling the information received, and in mailing letters to each household.

The directors voted to send letters to all business firms, and to have a notice in the Town Crier, saying that householders who might wish to participate can get study forms from the Chamber of Commerce.

Second special town meeting October 24

Wilmington selectmen have voted to call a second special town meeting on October 24. The main order of business will be to vote on plans for an addition and alterations to Wilmington High School.

The warrant for the meeting will be open until Sept. 23. Selectmen are scheduled to sign

Housing plans

This sketch of proposed housing was displayed Monday night at the meeting of the Wilmington Housing Authority. Members of the authority were speaking of an area near Lucci's for the housing units.

Housing

Thirdly the WHA could construct two, three and four bedroom family housing on individual lots of land, which it hopes to get from the town.

The position of the WHA was explained by Chairman William Strob. The WHA is strongly in support of S-2034, Strob said. It will be urging the support of the public for the bill, to bring it to the floor of the House of Representatives, and for a favorable vote at that time.

The Wilmington WHA has plans for housing for elderly and for handicapped, in an area in back of Lucci's Market. There would be six buildings, each of which would have two stories, and a community building. Two ground floor buildings in each building would be for handicapped people and four upstairs and down, for elderly residents.

The authority

Local residents react to horrors of flight 007

Some comments from local readers to the recent Soviet fighter attack on the Korean commercial airline flight 007:

A reader from Woburn noted, "Like every civilized person in this world, I was horrified by what the Soviets did to that Korean airliner. But I was also angry at the television reporters. Shortly after the Korean airliner was reported missing, at least one network interrupted programming to announce the airliner had made a forced landing on Sakhalin Island. We later learned this report was erroneous. Flight 007 really had been shot down by a Soviet fighter jet. What I don't understand is how such a terrible mistake could be made by tv journalists. Perhaps they should look a little further into a story before they jump on the air to make an announcement, especially when it concerns the fate of so many lives. Just think of how the families of those on board flight 007 felt when they heard the airliner had landed on Sakhalin Island."

Another reader from Woburn had this to say about President Reagan's first public comments on the international incident: "I was disappointed to hear President Reagan interject a few words about the death of Senator Henry 'Scoop' Jackson and his life-long devotion to patriotism, while overlooking the untimely death of Congressman Larry McDonald in the Korean jetliner crash. Was Congressman McDonald any less patriotic because he was killed in a plane shot down by the Soviets? I hardly think so. I'd say that that was the greatest sacrifice he could have made in the name of patriotism. In fact, Congressman McDonald was on his way to Korea to help further the cause of patriotism when he met his terrible fate."

"What the Soviets accomplished by shooting down that Korean airline is a total reversal of all the good achieved by that young Maine girl Samantha Smith's trip to the Soviet Union," contended Andrea K., of Wilmington. "When the media does its annual recap of 1983 at the end of the year, I bet very few stories will focus on the peace-seeking endeavors of that little girl. The stories will surely focus on how the fears of World War III were rekindled by a single, devastating act perpetrated by the Soviets against a helpless civilian aircraft."

A North Shore businessman who travels to Korea often remarked, "I've been travelling to Korea a couple of times a year for the last seven or eight years, and I never worried that this sort of incident could take place. But now that it has, it'll make me worry each time the plane in which I'm flying begins to skirt Soviet territory. Will my flight be the next to be shot down? If it happened once, it could happen again. I can't live my life in fear of this sort of thing happening to me, but it'll make me think twice each time I step onboard an airliner bound for Korea."

A reader from Stoneham said, "I thought it was ironic that the flight number was 007. For twenty years we've been watching another 007, James Bond, whip the dickens out of the Soviets in the movies. Now, in real life, the table has turned, and the Soviets have finally done in 007. Only in real life, innocent people died. There's no stage blood to wipe away after the Soviets shot down that Korean airliner."

Ronald R., also from Stoneham, indicated, "This whole incident just drives home one cold reality: that all those fears we Americans have had about the Russians are true. They are led by very cruel, militaristic egocentrics who want to rule the world. If any good can come out of this terrible tragedy, it'll be that we Americans can't afford to lull ourselves into a sense of false security, thinking the Russians really don't pose a threat to freedom. They do pose a threat to freedom, as any one of the surviving relatives of the victims on that Korean airliner will tell you."

"I'm still in shock," said a female reader from Woburn. "I can't imagine anybody actually torpedoing a commercial airliner out of the air."

Richard P., of Wilmington, thought it important to place the blame on the right people. "It wasn't a decision of the Russian people to shoot down that Korean airliner. I don't think it was so much a government decision either. It was a decision made by a narrow-minded military chain of command that sees very little light at the end of the totalitarian tunnel through which they view the world."

"I was pretty upset by the remarks made by the Russian representative to the U.N. He turned the whole incident around and tried to make it look like the United States was at fault for the Soviets' action against that Korean airline. As if we had somehow coerced the airline off its course as a way of provoking a nuclear war. If I had been Jeanne Kirkpatrick, I would have stood up at the U.N. meeting and straightened that Russian representative right out. It figures the Russians would try to use every sneaky trick possible to snake their way out of facing the music for their actions. It proves they can't be trusted." Those were the words of an angry reader who lives in Wakefield.

Still another reader, this one from Burlington, said, "What good came out of this tragedy? The very day after it happened one of the top news stores of the day was about one of the biggest grain deals ever between the Russians and the Americans. Granted, the deal was probably in the works for a long time and it was between private businessmen and not the governments per se. But I think the U.S. government should have intervened and stopped the sale, even if it meant underwriting the losses that would have been suffered by the U.S. businessmen. Just for principle alone. Taking Russian vodka off the shelves of liquor stores in a handful of states won't really hurt the Russians. Cutting them off from their major grain supply would. I'd hate to see a lot of innocent Russians get hurt as a result of a move of that kind, but sometimes innocent people are hurt so that a greater message can be given. The Russians powers-to-be didn't care

A growing problem

Women alcoholics equal or exceed men

By Mary Harz
Press Syndicate

Recent statistics reveal that in the United States today more than 60 percent of all adult women drink. 90 percent of all women in college drink. One out of three in each group is an alcoholic. Although government estimates on the number of active women alcoholics range from 1.3 to 3 million, there is growing conviction among professionals in the alcoholism field that the number is far greater and equals, or may even exceed, that of men.

Another surprising — and sad — statistic reveals that, although nine out of ten wives remain with their alcoholic husbands, nine out of ten men leave their alcoholic wives. According to Marianne Mackay, author of PRISMS (Fawcett Crest, $3.50), a novel about a young woman's struggle with alcoholism, this is largely due to societal attitudes that still persist about women drunks. "It has always been considered 'unladylike' for a woman to get drunk," observed Mackay recently. "The alcoholic wife receives less understanding than the alcoholic husband. The husband of an alcoholic wife is perceived as deprived and worthy of sympathy while his wife is seen as weak, self indulgent, immoral and worthless."

Mackay, herself a recovering alcoholic, is quick to point out that there is some good news in all of this: today, more and more women alcoholics are reaching out for help. Alcoholics Anonymous reports that one third of the people now entering A.A. are women: 25 percent homemakers; 15 percent executives; 15 percent office workers; 18 percent sales; 7 percent labor; 9 percent unemployed; 5 percent retired; and 1 percent other.

Historically, women alcoholics have been tougher to diagnose than men. "This is undoubtedly due to the fact that until recently alcoholic men had a greater visibility than women," contends Mackay. "Not too long ago a woman's primary role in adult life was that of homemaker. A housewife, sneaking her gins from under the kitchen sink, was difficult to find and reach. She remained hidden, living the life of a virtual prisoner in her own home, unaware that she was suffering from a disease for which there is all kinds of help."

Despite the fact that women's role in society has changed and continues to change drastically, much of the misdiagnosing of women alcoholics is steeped in cultural myth. Women manifesting blatant symptoms of alcoholism are frequently treated as though they were merely maladjusted. The most obvious symptoms may be excused, ignored or even tolerated. A vague, passive woman is not a cause for alarm in a lot of people. In fact, she might even be very acceptable in some areas. If her behavior is a little eccentric or depressed, that's acceptable too.

"Compounding the woman alcoholic's dilemma," says Mackay, "is the fact that she is more likely to become involved with other drugs as a result of misdiagnosis of her illness. Mood-altering drugs are freely dispensed by physicians and

Boston's new Copley Place- urban renewal of the most elegant kind

By Laurent Belsie
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor
Boston

Seven years ago, Kenneth Himmel had a far-fetched idea.

While other developers were packing off to the Sunbelt, he focused on Boston. He wanted to build a huge shopping complex in a city that, at the time, was more famous for tangled politics than urban development. Even more challenging, he proposed to build in the empty space above a highway interchange, catty-corner to the famous old Copley Square.

"People thought we were crazy," recalls Mr. Himmel, senior vice-president of Urban Investment and Development Company (UIC).

Nevertheless, Copley Place is scheduled to unveil its marble-and-tile floors, brass railings, and dramatic skylight early next year. Shoppers will be able to flock to Neiman-Marcus and Gucci. Employees will settle into their offices at IBM and Shawmut Bank. Already, one of the development's two hotels has opened for business.

Not only will posh Copley Place be the largest private development project in the city's history, but it also will be the largest single-phase project of its kind in the country.

Bostonians are asking themselves what impact the $500 million project will have on the city. And their perspectives reveal much about the city and the difficulties of urban development.

From a developer's point of view, that Copley Place was built at all is something of a miracle.

Until relatively recently, developers avoided cities, explains Benjamin Frank, vice-president for governmental affairs for Allied Stores, which owns a number of department store chains nationwide. "The urban areas had turned into cauldrons of riot and insurrection - Watts, Detroit, Newark [N.J.]. You just had an endless cycle of deterioration."

Then, suddenly, people began moving back. Suburbs no longer were seen as having all the good life, Mr. Frank says. "Watering the lawn was not the supreme dream of everyone anymore."

So, developers looked once again to the city. Frank claims to have been the first to see Boston's potential. From his ideas evolved Lafayette Place, a downtown multi-use project that will be ready for stores to open this fall. Himmel was not far behind.

From his 47th-floor office in the John Hancock Building, Himmel can look out on his project of precast concrete and glass atriums. To the right is the affluent Back Bay neighborhood, to the left, the racially and economically diverse South End, and in the distance, poverty-stricken Roxbury neatly disguised as row houses.

For Anne Boynton, a Back Bay merchant, Copley Place will be good.

With her husband, Martin Halper, she owns the moderate- to high-priced Annie B restaurant. Like many merchants here, she anticipates more customers. "The more [business] there is, the more it brings," she says.

Dollars and cents, however, are not the only ways of gauging success. Unless care is taken, observers say, there is danger that Copley Place will create even more of a gap between rich and poor, successful commercial projects and deteriorating neighborhoods.

Like many urban development projects, Copley Place has run smack into big-city politics and critical Boston issues.

Some Back Bay merchants, for example, are concerned about Copley's impact on the tight parking situation. While Copley Place expects to draw up to 5,500 visitors daily, it has only 1,432 parking spaces to accommodate them. Of those, roughly two-thirds belong to the project's two luxury hotels, leaving few for shoppers and office employees.

One of the prime sites for a new parking garage would be on an adjacent lot in the South End. But the site, known as Tent City, is embroiled in the second of Boston's thorny issues: affordable housing.

For years a concerned citizens group has been trying to get low- and moderate-income housing built on the site. A plan to incorporate both housing and parking has been approved by Boston's redevelopment authority, according to UIC, but the citizens group is moving carefully with plans of its own.

A few blocks away, at the Union United Methodist Church, the Rev. Charles Stith raises the third critical Boston issue: minority jobs.

So far, affirmative action has been an integral part of the project. Half of the 1,000 con-

Of 6,000 jobs the project is expected to create, 50 percent are slated to go to women and 30 percent to minorities.

struction jobs went to Boston residents. Of roughly 6,000 permanent employment slots Copley Place is expected to generate, 50 percent are slated to go to women and 30 percent to minorities. The Rev. Mr. Stith and a group of minority clergymen are investigating how well that plan has been carried out in the Westin Hotel, which opened for business Aug. 1.

Copley Place, he says, "could be a signal that the city is for the rich, the chic, the hip, the whites. Or it could cut in a slice of the community that has been cut out."

"The boom years of this economy were made when there were attempts to involve the black community. For those people who think they've seen a renaissance in Boston - what's the old Hollywood accent? - 'You ain't seen nothin' yet.'"

"I do feel it will give people jobs," says Mary Lou Wharton, who cares for five children of working parents at her home on St. Botolph Street. Located two doors away from the construction site, she is feeling the commercial impact of Copley Place.

Property values have skyrocketed since she bought her house for $13,500 in 1958. Recently, after refusing one offer in excess of $150,000, she was offered triple the amount.

"I want to stay here," she says, adding that she hopes her street can continue to attract families with children and maintain its sense of neighborhood.

CPR, first aid classes at Choate

"Emergency: You Can Help!", this year's theme for Emergency Medicine Week, draws attention to the fact that everyone can be trained to know what to do in an emergency.

In conjunction with special events planned by the Metropolitan Boston Hospital Council for the week of Sept. 14-20, Choate-Symmes Health Services announces community education programs in Basic CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and Standard Multimedia First Aid.

The nine-hour CPR classes, which carry American Heart Association or American Red Cross certification, began Monday at both the Symmes Hospital Division in Arlington and the Regional Health Center in Wilmington Division. The classes are conducted from 7 to 10 p.m. and meet also Sept. 19 and 26.

Instructors are certified trainers who meet the highest standards of the certifying association. Many are professional emergency personnel employed by area fire or police departments or ambulance companies.

A Standard Multimedia First Aid course, certified by the American Red Cross, will begin Thursday, Sept. 15, at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington and meet also Sept. 22 and 29.

Because individual instruction is important, enrollment is purposely kept to a minimum. Pre-registration is required.

To register for the Symmes classes, (which are held in the Residence Building at the hospital), please call the Community Relations Department, 646-1500, ext. 1442. For the CPR and First Aid classes at the Health Center, please call the Health Education Department there, 657-3910, ext. 567. A minimum fee covers expenses.

Women alcoholics on the increase psychiatrists who contend that these women are victims of their own helplessness and dependence." As a result, women in America annually receive twice as many prescriptions for mind-altering drugs as men — thus creating the double-whammy effect of cross-addiction.

Studies on alcoholism in women have been slow to appear compared to those about men. From the few studies that have been done, there is mounting evidence that alcohol affects the sexes differently. Recent research by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism reveals that women may become more intoxicated than men on the same amount of alcohol, even when body weights are identical. One explanation for this is that a woman has less body fluid and more body fat than a man. And since alcohol does not diffuse as rapidly into body fat, the concentration of alcohol in a woman's blood will be higher.

As the physiological effects of alcohol and the diagnosis and treatment of alcoholism are different for women, so are the disease's ramifications, not the least of which are its effects on unborn children. Only recently it has been discovered that maternal alcoholism can cause infant addiction to alcohol and Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, which is produced by drinking during pregnancy, could cause mental retardation and deformities of the face, heart and limbs. While it hasn't been widely publicized, the Surgeon General has recommended that women not drink during pregnancy.

And what of the young child who comes home from school to find his or her mother passed out on the living room rug? According to Mackay, the fear and shame are beyond description. So are the possible long-term effects. The protagonist in Mackay's PRISMS, who starts to drink as a teenager, encounters such a scene with her mother. "Offspring of alcoholics develop alcoholism more often than the children of non-alcoholics," says Mackay. "In my own family alcoholism is rampant and goes back generation after generation."

Mackay urges anyone who thinks she may be an alcoholic to seek help immediately.

If you're not sure if you have a drinking problem, Mackay suggests answering the following questions:

Do you drink to feel better about yourself?

Do you turn to alcohol when you are troubled?

Do you make excuses for your drinking?

Do you feel guilty after drinking?

Do you drink alone?

Do you watch your drinking when with others?

Do you feel isolated and alone?

Do you defend your right to drink?

Do you hide the true extent of your drinking from others?

Do you associate with or seek out people who drink the way you do?

Do you plan activities around opportunities to drink?

Do you fail in your promises to yourself or others to cut down on your drinking?

Do you not drink at times because you are afraid of the consequences?

If you have answered "yes" to any of these questions, it might be wise to seek help. Alcoholics Anonymous and other alcoholism assistance agencies are listed in every telephone book. Anyone is welcome at an open AA meeting.

"To seek help," Mackay concludes, "one need not 'hit bottom.' In fact, the earlier the intervention in the disease's progression, the greater the chances for recovery and a return to a rich and productive life."

Liberal Arts graduates have job problems

The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that, due to an oversupply of college graduates with liberal arts degrees, one out of every five of these college grads may be forced to take a job that does not require a degree. In fact, of the 20 careers projected by the BLS to show the most rapid employment growth in the next decade, 14 will require vocational training — training that is available at America's trade and technical schools.

According to Mike Freedland, president of the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools (NATTS), "It's an age of specialized skills — and more and more employers are looking for people with skill training — people with the necessary skills to be a bank teller, commercial artist, computer programmer, electronics technician, medical technologist, office manager, and secretary."

Career Schools Provide Training
For those with specific training, especially in technical careers, there are many opportunities. Private career schools, such as those accredited by NATTS, an educational association representing more than 600 private career schools across the country, provide training for these technical jobs of the future.

Since these schools depend upon their students' success in the marketplace for their survival, they have to know what jobs will be in demand. The most important question then, for trade and technical schools — and one many students are asking themselves — is where are the jobs?

There are several career areas that labor experts see as having tremendous potential growth in the coming decade. All of these career fields are offered at NATTS schools with short, job-intensive training at a school committed to training students for jobs that exist today.

Jobs of the '80s

Computers — The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that computer-related jobs may rise from 1.2 million in 1978 to 2.1 million in 1990, an increase of 85 percent. Some of the specific computer occupations that are expected to grow are computer programmers, computer operators, and computer service technicians.

Health-related occupations — The future, as well as the present demand for people with these occupational skills continues. A recent survey by the American Hospital Association reveals that the most critical shortages will be in the medical laboratory field, X-ray technology and respiratory therapy.

Electronics — The electronics industry produces about 30,000 types of electronic goods — and they all have to be installed, maintained and repaired. Each year the number of electronic products grows — and with it grow the opportunities for employment.

Others — Engineering shortages are expected to continue through the 1980s and that means more trained workers to design, build and repair high technology equipment. Growth in the secretarial and auto mechanic fields is expected to be good into the next decade.

Advantages of Private Career Schools

NATTS schools provide training in all these fields. According to Mike Freedland, "These schools' advantage is that they offer specialized training at a lower cost, and with a quicker training period than most colleges and universities. Also, they emphasize 'hands-on' training, using equipment similar to that used on the job."

Free Handbook Available

For further information on America's trade and technical schools, you can write for a free handbook listing more than 600 career schools, their locations, and the courses they offer.

that scores of innocent lives would be taken when they decided to down that Korean airline. And many more innocent victims, the families and friends of those who were killed, are going to continue to suffer because of that decision."

An engineer from Long Island, visiting Burlington, added,

"Those Russians apparently don't care about the international air code, which states that a fighter jet can only shoot five hundred feet over or in front of an aircraft to warn it, then order it to follow the fighter down. Russia is the only country not prescribing to that code."

ANNIE'S COMING

America's best known little curly redhead is coming to North Reading! The North Reading Theatre Workshop, Inc. is pleased to announce the addition of the musical "Annie" to its 1983-1984 season, to be presented on Jan. 13, 14, and 15, 1984.

"Annie," based on the comic strip, "Little Orphan Annie," chronicles her life as she leaves the orphanage for Daddy Warbucks' home and an eventual search for her real parents. The show features a score which includes Annie's plaintive "Maybe," Daddy Warbucks' tribute to "N.Y.C.," Miss Hannigan's hysterical disgust for "Little Girls," and that musical beacon of hope and better times, "Tomorrow."

The cast of "Annie" requires orphan children who must sing and dance, and a number of featured adults, including Daddy Warbucks, Miss Hannigan, Warbucks' secretary Grace Farrell, and Hannigan's devious brother and his fiancée, Rooster and Lily. These are also singing parts, and all adults and children are requested to audition with a song from the show. There is also a chorus of adults who will play "Hooverites," servants, and cabinet members.

Auditions will be held for children on Wednesday, Sept. 28 at the E. Ethel Little School in North Reading from 3 to 9:30 p.m. Children auditioning on that day may be asked to stay through the evening; parents may wish to make arrangements to that end. Adult auditions will be held on Thursday, Sept. 29 at North Reading High School from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., and call-backs for both groups will be held on Friday, Sept. 30. Details will be available at the auditions.

For more information regarding the auditions, please contact the Greens at 24 Haverhill Street, North Reading (664-3949). Hope to see you at auditions!

VIEW THE WHALES

Greenpeace, the worldwide environmental group known for its work protecting the whales from extinction, will be enbarking many times this fall for more pleasant encounters with the whales. Thousands of people are expected to join the environmentalists for their fall whale watching trips from Provincetown and Plymouth Harbors.

Stellwagen Bank, a major summer feeding ground for the humpback, minke, finback and right whales, extends northward from Cape Cod across the mouth of Massachusetts Bay. The area, also abundant in fish and seabirds, is the summer residence for a population of humpback whales that winter in the Caribbean. Marine biologists, studying this population and on board the Greenpeace whale watches, have developed methods to identify individual animals. They provide Greenpeace whale watchers not only with a general commentary on the whales, but can provide information on many of the individual whales in this population. Humpback whales are approximately 50 feet at adult size, and are a favorite with whale watchers because of their spectacular acrobatic behavior.

Other possible whale sightings include the finback, which is the second largest animal in the world; minke whales the smallest baleen (filter feeders); right whales the most endangered whale in the world; and the orca, also known as the killer whale. Dolphins are also sighted in pods of up to 300 animals.

"The money raised from the sale of the tickets helps our organization in its work," states Christian. "Greenpeace has been active for over 10 years, leading the struggle to end commercial whaling. In 1982 the International Whaling Commission voted a three year phase out of commercial whaling. Although several nations have announced they will continue their whaling activity despite this international conservation regulation, Greenpeace is dedicated to assuring its enforcement."

To find out more about Greenpeace Whale Watches write or call Greenpeace New England, 286 Congress St., Boston, Ma. 02210, telephone (617) 542-8134.

FESTIVAL OF CHARIOTS

On Friday and Saturday, September 16 and 17, thousands will attend the Sixth Annual Festival of the Chariots sponsored by the International Society of Krishna Consciousness. The chariot parade begins Saturday at noon on Boylston Street near the Prudential Center and proceeds to the Boston Common festival site near Park Street Station. The parade traditionally features a three-ton, four-story, elaborately decorated wooden cart pulled by festival goers along the parade route to the pavilion site.

The Kancamagus Highway

A DELIGHT AT ANY TIME OF YEAR

By Lisa Lane

Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

THE White Mountains, which spread across northern New Hampshire and into Maine, form the most mountainous region in New England. The breathtaking scenery, the ice-cold mountain streams and waterfalls, and the many picnic spots and campgrounds make this a delightful and much-used outdoor recreational area.

When my husband and I go there, we tend to shy away from the more popular spots, concentrating instead on the less-visited northern section of the mountains. We had always, for instance, avoided the Kancamagus Highway — considered by many the most scenic road in New England — despite the allure of its numerous campgrounds (which are always full in the summer) and hiking trails (again, which tend to be used by many people).

During the second week in October, the "official" leaf-watching week, the Kancamagus is an extremely busy highway. The undulating mountain road offers spectacular views of brilliant red maples and other mountain foliage.

One recent morning, we decided to change our habits and take a pre-foliage drive along the renowned highway. It was a good decision. The towering pine trees, sparkling river, almost overpowering mountains, and shimmering birch trees fascinated us. The early morning fog, swirling between the trees and across the river, gave the drive a mysterious, ethereal quality.

Our first stop was the Boulder Loop trail, accessible from the Covered Bridge Campground. We crossed the Swift River over the well-cared-for covered bridge and found the sign for the trail, a 2.8-mile hike described in the guidebook as "a gradual climb with some steep pitches." (For any person accustomed to rough walking this short hike is a pleasant hour-and-a-half.)

The trail is indeed a gradual climb, but it traverses along sheer outcrops of granite that look as if they have been carefully placed to form an impassable wall. It was dark along the trail because the towering trees blocked out what little sun there was. The view from the top of the trail is magnificent — sheer cliffs, the rushing, winding river, and distant tree-covered mountains.

The return hike was equally beautiful. Dense green underbrush, fallen trees, and a muddy, leaf-filled stream outline the gently sloping trail. Halfway down it started to rain, lightly but persistently; before we got to the end of the trail, it was coming down quite hard. I ran the last part and reached the car just as the real downpour began.

After a breath-catching rest in the steamy, hot car, we decided to continue our drive up the highway. We planned to scout out the sights and then stop at them on the return trip. As we drove along, passing Lower Falls, Rocky Gorge, Passaconaway, Champney Falls, and Sabbaday Falls, the rain lessened. By the time we had reached the end of the 30-mile drive the clouds had cleared and the rain had stopped.

We turned around and drove to Sabbaday Falls, a very short, picturesque hike. Sabbaday Falls, named by the early New Hampshire settlers who stopped here for water on the Sabbath, is a series of waterfalls cascading into a narrow gorge, forming a crystal-clear pool. Wooden stairs and bridges enable the hiker to go to the top of the falls without difficulty, and carved plaques tell the history of its formation.

The Champney Falls trail, one of the trails to the top of Mt. Chocoma, is longer, somewhat steeper, and not as clearly defined as the Sabbaday Falls trail. We had to keep a sharp lookout for the yellow trail markers to be sure we were going in the right direction.

The people we met on the hike were friendly. We exchanged the traditional "Hello, how's the trail?" and, without pausing, continued the climb, each hiking party respecting the other's privacy.

Gnarled tree roots and soft pine needles carpet the winding trail, and the sound of water deadened the noise of our feet — even though the East's dry summer has reduced Champney Falls to a relative trickle. The lack of water allowed us to climb to a large boulder in the middle of the stream bed. We sat there, the noises of the forest silenced by the falls, looking down the stream. No one else was within sight or earshot. We seemed to be in another world of solitude and peace.

Just below the Champney Falls are the Pitcher Falls, a narrow cascade of water, plunging over a steep cliff. The moss-covered granite walls rise sharply on either side of a ravine, and the falling water forms a large pond at the bottom.

The Lower Falls, along the Swift River, is the largest and most popular picnic area along the Kancamagus. The rapidly cascading water and clear, deep-blue pools look cool and inviting. The large boulders, which are easily accessible from the river bank, provide warm, but not so comfortable, sitting places for picnics and sunbathing.

We found a very large, flat, sun-warmed boulder on the edge of the river. We had brought a real picnic — a basket with plates and silverware, and a cooler with fruit salad, vegetable salad, cheese biscuits, and cold chicken.

We watched the people up river take short swims and float around in inner tubes. The serenity and solitude of the mountains was palpable even at this crowded swimming area where strangers said, "Hi," and helped each other across the stream.

Practical Information

The most complete source of information is the Appalachian Mountain Club White Mountain Guide.

The guide lists every trail and includes a detailed description of important markers, the steep sections of the trail, the distance, and the time it will take the average walker to complete. The guide is accurate, and the time allowed for completing the hike generous. The AMC guide, which costs $9.95, is available from the Appalachian Mountain Club, 5 Joy Street, Boston, Mass., or through a bookstore.

The traditional week for fall foliage touring is the second week in October. During this week the traffic is very heavy. It is best to begin touring before 9 a.m., when traffic is a little lighter. The weekdays are less congested than the weekends and Saturday is less crowded than Sunday.

The American Automobile Association gives fall foliage advisories beginning the second or third week in September. AAA tracks the changing foliage to help visitors plan their trip during the peak of the season, when the color is at its best.

There are no eating facilities in the White Mountain section of the Kancamagus Highway. A picnic lunch is recommended, and there are variety stores at either end of the highway which supply picnic and camping needs.

The Kancamagus Highway (Route 112) intersects Interstate 93 from the west, and Route 16 from the east. The highway is clearly marked.

Tips on hiking while in White Mountains

By a staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

For all their serenity and beauty, the White Mountains need to be treated with respect. Every year, hikers are lost or injured on the more challenging trails because they are not prepared for the sudden changes in weather and temperature that often occur within minutes. If you plan to take a day hike rather than the shorter hikes mentioned above, here are some tips to help make it enjoyable and safe:

- Carry a compass and map, a jack-knife, matches (in a waterproof container), and a small emergency supply of food such as cheese or chocolate.
- Let others know where you are going and adhere to your plans.
- Allow sufficient time to complete your trip before dark.
- If going above timberline, carry extra warm and windproof clothing. If the weather becomes bad, turn back.
- If you do become lost, remain calm. Stay where you are. If you are above the timberline, it is best to move downhill to the protection of the timber. If you are cold, gather dry branches and build a fire. Have a supply of green branches on hand to keep the fire from spreading. Stay with the fire. Listen and look for signals of the Forest Service personnel who will be searching for you.

There are also some unwritten rules when hiking, which help to ensure a pleasant outing for yourself as well as others you might come in contact with. Perhaps the most important: Carry out what you carry in. Nothing can ruin the away-from-it-all feeling faster than a trail littered with candy wrappers and soda cans.

Another important courtesy is to keep your children and your pets under control. Your children should respect the quiet of the mountains. And your pets should be on a leash, unless they are trained to obey immediately.

Geo. facts

The Thames River meanders for 236 miles across southern England, with more than 1,400 million gallons of fresh water pouring into the tidal Thames at Teddington, National Geographic reports. The river supplies 75 percent of the needs of the 12 million inhabitants of the Thames basin.

Seventy percent of man's body is water, the same proportion as the surface of the Earth, National Geographic says.

Some "butterflies" don't fly — they swim. Known as sea butterflies, they are actually relatives of snails and live in the open ocean. Their small, stubby wings enable them to move about in the water with fluttering motions, National Geographic World magazine says.

The most massive land-loss problem in the coastal United States is centered in the Mississippi River Delta. Since 1956, about 850 square miles of Louisiana's deltaic plain has been lost. The process, caused by everything from man-made canals to hurricanes, claims about 40 more square miles each year — and is accelerating, National Geographic says.

VOLUNTEERS

Adults who haven't paid much attention to science since they left school have a chance to get up-to-date when they become volunteers at the Museum of Science.

Now seeking volunteers for the fall season, the Museum looks for people who would like to explore new fields.

"An interest in learning, not necessarily a science degree, is our primary requirement," says Jonnet Holladay, director of volunteers. "The Museum provides on-going training, and activities especially arranged for volunteers, to make the experience stimulating."

Benefits include free parking, library-borrowing privileges, and discounts in the restaurants and store. Adults with some science or educational background are assigned as guides either in the Arthur D. Little Discovery Room or at selected exhibits. The Discovery Room offers materials a tools that may handled and investigated. Guides exhibits help visitors of all ages to understand aspects of the presentation that might otherwise miss.

Volunteers are also needed for Project E-Opener, which introduces second-grade children to the Museum. Each volunteer becomes a friend and host to two or three children every Tuesday morning, showing them select exhibits and seeing that they meet the animals from the Animal Center.

Other volunteer opportunities are working on special events such as the Pops benefit promoting memberships, or assisting in the library or store. To arrange an interview, prospective volunteers should call the Service League Office at (617) 723-2500 ext. 259.

Webster's creates a 'browsable dictionary'

The first American dictionary to date main entries, showing when words entered the English language, has been published by Merriam-Webster Inc.

The book is Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, and according to Merriam president William A. Llewellyn, is a milestone in American lexicography.

Entries in the Ninth show a date when the first sense of the word entered written English. "Vaporize," for instance, dates to 1634. "Typewriter" goes back to 1868. "Waistband" to 1584. "Bioethics" to 1971 and "petrodollars" to 1974. The word "president" actually dates to the 14th century.

"This unique feature adds enormously to the reference value of the work, and for many people will make the dictionary browsable for the first time," according to Dr. Frederick C. Mish, editor-in-chief of the Ninth.

Llewellyn called it an "innovation in American lexicography" that will set a new standard of usefulness and quality in American dictionaries. It may also change for all time what a desk dictionary is expected to contain, he said.

In addition to dated entries, the Ninth also contains thousands of new words and meanings, and for the first time ever in a Merriam dictionary, authoritative discussions on usage at words that are often misused, confused or disputed.

These usage essays cover such terms as "media," "finalize," "hopefully," "hardly," "neither," "disinterested" — and many more.

"In no instance does a usage paragraph simply repeat the opinions of a handful of supposed experts," according to Dr. Mish. "Each gives the facts of usage as shown in Merriam's citation file, and includes historical background and seasonable advice for the reader."

A number of the paragraphs deal with disputed pronunciations, a subject seldom treated in ordinary works of usage, Mish noted. These include "nuclear" (Eisenhower said "nucular"), "library" (some say "liberry"), "February" (you can say February) and "kilometer" (we accent the second syllable).

COLLEGIATE SERIES

Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary is the ninth edition of Merriam's Collegiate series which have been best-sellers since 1898. The Eighth alone sold over 11,000,000 copies in just ten years, making it the largest-selling desk dictionary in the world.

In addition to the A to Z vocabulary, the Ninth includes sections on Abbreviations, Foreign Words and Phrases, Biographical Names, Geographical Names, over 500 pictorial illustrations and a 23-page Handbook of Style. There is also an informative essay, "The English Language in the Dictionary," that the user will find of special interest. Written by Dr. Mish it is a detailed discussion not only of the history of language but how words find their way into Merriam dictionaries.

A new addition to Merriam dictionaries published in the Ninth is A Guide to English Spelling and Sound Correspondences. The guide is for those who have trouble spelling those words that are spelled differently than their sound implies.

Unabridged, but all make their first appearance in a Merriam dictionary with the Ninth.

Some words are found in no other dictionary — "microchip," "supply-side," "Moonie," "Agent Orange," among others.

The words are drawn from just about every field of human interest and activity, according to Dr. Mish. From computer technology there is "floppy disk," "megabyte," "PASCAL," "kilobyte," and of course "microchip." Life in the 80's has given us "boat people," "palimony," "parenting," "condo," "gentrification," and "hands on." There is "trickle down" and "Watergate." From slang: "pig out," "wacko," and "scuzzy." Science has given us "Kirlian photography," "viewdata" and "CAT scan," and hundreds more.

Not all entries in the Ninth are dated. Trademarks, words from mythology and others are not dated. The dating itself is divided into three categories. Words from Old English, that is before the 12th century, are designated "bef. 12c." Entries from Middle English are indicated by the century, such as "14c." Only words from the 15th century onward are given a specific year. Dr. Mish stressed that the date used is for the first entered sense only, and that it is at the point when the word entered the written, not spoken, language as found by Merriam editors. Many words were probably used for years before being written down, Mish said.

"The scholarship and skill that have made Merriam-Webster Collegiate the most widely used and respected dictionaries in the world establish a new standard of excellence with this edition," Mish notes. "Its accuracy, clarity and comprehensiveness will be approved by even the most demanding user."

"The Ninth was designed for the creative user of the dictionary," Mish said. "We perceive the Ninth as Merriam-Webster's latest contribution to the art of using language effectively and intelligently. It is undoubtedly the finest such dictionary we have ever produced."

Webster's Ninth New Collegiate dictionary, published in hard cover, is 1,564 pages long and priced at $14.95. It will be available in bookstores and wherever books are sold.

Woodchips ANTHONY MANCONI My Swedish friends

Some of the most beautiful people in the world are Swedish. Their external visible beauty is their crystal clear blue eyes, natural luxurious blonde hair and their tall, lean structure. The internal beauty although invisible, is a more important attribute that is readily apparent. It's their genuine friendliness, compassion and love for people. These statements are more than justified by virtue of my many years of close association with them as fellow workers in the Boston Naval Shipyard.

Many of them invited me to their homes, weddings and various social events as an equal member of their families. Two in particular, Charles Johnson and Oscar Swanson, have a treasured place in my memory. These two gentlemen were my mentors, teachers and personal friends. I consider myself fortunate indeed to know so many from that Nordic Land: Sweden.

I learned from these wonderful people that Craftsmanship is held on a high honored pedestal in the land of their birth, Sweden. Their educational system requires without exception that each student learn a trade along with their academic studies. The primary goal of a degree in medicine, law or engineering not withstanding, it was mandatory for everyone to acquire a skill like carpentry, painting, mechanics for the young men and dressmaking, cooking, etc., for the young ladies. It is not uncommon for a doctor of medicine or an attorney to shingle his own house and the female members of those professions to design and sew their own dresses and evening gowns.

The world in general, and America in particular, has sacrificed versatility on the high altar of specialization. A case in point - a recent medical school graduate told his father, a family doctor, that he was going to specialize on the "nose." His disappointed father asked this poignant question, "Which nostril, son?"

We are grateful Sweden, for your Sons and Daughters who by example have taught me and others that work that is just "Good enough," is not "Good enough," to keep America, the greatest country in the world.

Home buyers lecture series offered in Framingham

Owning a home may be the American Dream, but don't let dreams guide you when making a housing choice. Because buying a home is one of the largest financial investments a person makes, it is best to be fully informed every step of the way. The Home Buyer Lecture Series will provide information and assistance in the "ins and outs" of home buying. A series of three evening meetings (7:00 - 9:30 P.M.) will be held on Tuesdays, September 20, 27 and October 4, 1983, at the Framingham Public Library, 49 Lexington Street, Framingham. Space is limited, so place register early. Send your name, address and phone number to Home Buyer Lecture Series, 105 Everett St., Concord, Ma. 01742, or call 369-4845 or 862-2380. For more information, contact Jill Desmarais at the Extension Service.

All programs are open to the public regardless of race, color or national origin.

A back to school invitation from the Einstein Library

A new small library in Boston is extending an invitation to students of all ages to come and learn more about Einstein's theories...and Einstein the man.

Solomon Quasha, director of the Albert Einstein Library, Inc., a private, nonprofit free library, says, "Einstein was a giant of a man who changed our concept of the universe. Recipient of an honorary degree from Harvard, Einstein was not only a great scientist, humanitarian and pacifist, he was also a great educator associated with major universities. He lectured throughout the world, and at the same time he took a personal interest in furthering the education of individual students."

The Einstein Library is also concerned about individual students, according to Quasha. "We have already helped many students with their quest for knowledge about Einstein, and we have resources that will help many more."

Noting a paradox about Einstein, he explains, "Einstein's name is known by nearly everyone, along with his distinctive face, but it's amazing how little the average person knows about his theories and his personal life. That is why we have spent the past several years gathering Einstein material from around the world."

The library has 2 biographical films; 135 books; hundreds of photographs, slides, magazine and newspaper articles; an 18-poster biography; the results of the most recent relativity tests...and much more.

A program now being offered for high school and junior college students consists of a 40-minute slide show followed by the hour-long NOVA film, "Einstein." This and other special programs are available on request, with two weeks notice needed.

"It would be worth a visit here just to see our 18-poster pictorial biography of Einstein prepared by the American Institute of Physics," says Quasha. "We may be a small library, but we have gathered some truly fascinating information to benefit students of all ages, both scholars and hobbyists."

At the Albert Einstein Library, visitors can read books, browse through periodicals, view photos, and see films (when requested in advance) from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday through Saturday at 755 Boylston Street, Boston, near Prudential Center. For more information, call 536-3131.

p.m. The greenhouses are located at 185 Lyman Street, Waltham.

The greenhouses are the oldest standing ones in the United States. They shelter grapevines planted in 1870 and 100 year-old camellia trees which bloom November through March. Lyman Estate, "The Vale," is owned and operated by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities.

Rare begonias, herbs, scented geraniums, cymbidium orchids, orchid cacti, camellias and other choice and unusual plants will be for sale. The greenhouses are open year-round Thursday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Group tours are available by appointment. The normal admission of $1.50 is waived during the sale.

To reach the Estate, take Route 20 (Main Street, Waltham) to Lyman Street or take Route 60, then south on Beaver Street to the Estate at the rotary.

Rotten tomatoes plague growers

Many homeowners are now harvesting luscious, red, juicy tomatoes from the garden patch, but many others, who should be are not. The Middlesex County Extension Service has received many inquiries about red tomatoes having a rotten blossom. This is identified as a physiological disorder called "blossom-end rot."

Blossom-end rot first appears as a water soaked lesion on the blossom end or bottom of the fruit, which gradually blackens as the fruit matures. To avoid this problem in the future, the Middlesex County Extension Service suggests homeowners have a soil pH test done to determine if additional limestone (calcium) is needed, maintain a proper balance of essential plant nutrients, water gardens properly, (a minimum of one inch a week), and avoid fluctuating soil moisture levels, (mulch helps retain moisture).

FDA approval was all it needed

Soda industry sees nothing bitter about NutraSweet

By Francine Kiefer
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

Who would think the combination of two amino acids would have such an impact.

But NutraSweet, the sweetener accidentally discovered and then marketed by G. D. Searle & Co., is causing the soft-drink industry to modify its product line. It will also carry Searle "into a tremendous growth phase."

BUSINESS SCENE

Comments David Saks, an analyst with A. G. Becker, the brokerage house. Searle is a drug company based in Skokie, Ill.

Since the Food and Drug Administration approved NutraSweet for soft-drink use in July, the sweetener has been introduced in Diet Coke, Diet Rite Cola (which has the new twist of being salt free), and Diet Squirt — a citrus-based drink made by Squirt and Company. The reformulated products are in limited areas now, but by year's end will have spread to all their markets, say company officials.

In spite of lingering health concerns about the sweetener as well as higher costs, analysts see the whole soft-drink industry shifting to aspartame (the generic name for NutraSweet) in the next year or two.

"It's a necessity. You can't afford to let your competitors have the edge," says Allan Kaplan, a beverage analyst at Merrill Lynch. The Washington Post recently reported that the makers of Seven-Up, Pepsi, and Dr. Pepper soft drinks are now negotiating with Searle.

Why are these soft-drink makers so hot on NutraSweet? Because it's a low-calorie sweetener that tastes good. "For taste, we believe it's very desirable. It mitigates the aftertaste [from saccharine]," says Robert Martin, a spokesman for Coca-Cola USA. And because it is low in calories, aspartame applies to the fastest growing segment of the soft-drink market — diet drinks. Some analysts say aspartame will give diet drinks 50 percent of the soda market. Now they run at around 19 percent. This growth may also cause the entire industry to grow by about 4 percent annually, compared to a present growth rate of 2 1/2 to 3 percent, some analysts believe.

NutraSweet is new to the US but not to the rest of the world. Canada has been using it in diet drinks since 1981 to replace cyclamates and saccharine, both banned there. Europe uses it too.

While Canada uses only NutraSweet to sweeten diet drinks, this is not the case with Diet Coke and Diet Rite Cola. NutraSweet makes up 20 to 30 percent of the sweetener in these drinks, analysts believe, and the rest is saccharine. Saccharine keeps NutraSweet's shelf life stable, since the sweetener is found to break down over time and in warm temperatures. And NutraSweet is expensive: $90 per pound vs. $4 for saccharine. Fred Adamany, president of Royal Crown Cola, says NutraSweet will mean an added cost of about "5 to 6 cents per six-pack" of Diet Rite.

Despite NutraSweet's cost, Diet Squirt's sweetener will be 100 percent NutraSweet, says Dennis Eade of Michigan-based Squirt and Company. Consumers have concerns, "whether verifiable or not, about saccharine as a sweetener." The saccharine warning label, connecting it to cancer in laboratory animals, keeps some people away, he says.

Mr. Eade also comments that the company has solved aspartame's shelf-life problem after four years of research. And cost increases will be partially offset by higher volume, which the privately held company expects will double this year.

George Thompson, a beverage analyst at Prudential-Bache, believes the soft-drink makers will eventually move to 100 percent aspartame. "It doesn't take a rocket scientist to cool down a can of Coke," he says, implying the shelf-life problem is not a big obstacle. Although no one knows the exact plans of Seven-Up, Mr. Thompson thinks a move to 100 percent aspartame would fit the company's marketing strategy of a natural drink with no caffeine and no artificial colors or flavors. And once Seven-Up moves, the rest of the industry will follow.

"Coke and Pepsi are most frightened by Philip Morris [the cigaretemaker which owns Seven-Up]," says Mr. Thompson. The subsidiary's "natural" marketing campaign has given 7-Up recent market share gains, a feat difficult in this competitive industry. Thompson says cost is the reason Coke and Royal Crown are keeping NutraSweet content under 50 percent.

In all of this, Searle should profit handsomely. With a patent that lasts until 1992, aspartame "is going to become Searle's aircraft carrier and battleship," says analyst Saks at A. G. Becker. "The market is going to be huge." Saks thinks there will be little price change over the next few years because "it's a seller's market."

The question most observers seem to be asking Searle, though, is whether it can keep up with demand. "We have the ability to supply their needs," says Robert Shapiro, head of aspartame development at Searle. The company has expanded its production facilities, recently signed an agreement with Genex Inc. to provide amino acids needed to make aspartame, and expects another facility to come on-line in 1985.

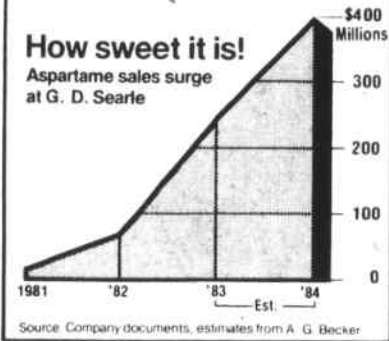

The one thing that could throw a damper on all this is a health issue raised by a scientist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Based on tests with rats, the scientist suspects aspartame in soft drinks, combined with starchy foods, could be harmful to some people. But a spokesman from the FDA says this information was known and considered before it approved the sweetener. The FDA has no intention of recalling its approval, the spokesman said. Still, the National Soft Drink Association considers it worthy of further research.

Check heating system before cold winds blow

HEATING COSTS GUIDE

A free folder shows the amount of heat your dollar will buy, for seven combinations of fuels and heating systems. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for "Fuel Cost Facts" to the Better Heating-Cooling Council, P.O. Box 218, Berkeley Heights, N.J. 07922.

A range of current prices are shown for electricity, gas, and oil, reflecting energy costs for most areas. Conversion Factors are also provided to find the amount of fuel you would use if you switched from one to another, or from one heating system to another.

HIGH EFFICIENCY HEATING

With the cost of heating energy now at an all time high, this may be the time to consider upgrading your heating unit. In recent years improvements have been made in boiler operating efficiency, to help keep your bills under control, reports the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Have the efficiency of your present boiler tested by a reputable contractor. Most boilers operate at better than 75 percent efficiency, and the new designs often exceed 80 percent. If your old boiler is much below 70 percent it may pay to get quotations for installing a new one.

CHECK YOUR HEATING LOSSES

How much fuel you can save depends on the type of heating system you have, and how it is operating now. The system consists of a lot more than just the basic heating unit, reminds the Better Heating-Cooling Council, so check the rest of it to cut costs.

The ducts of a hot air system can be wasting heat. Where they go through unheated areas of your home they may be radiating heat in places where it is not needed. Insulation batts, 2" thick, can make a major improvement.

However, before you wrap the ducts, make sure all seams are carefully sealed. Even with insulation around them, they can leak large quantities of air, stealing BTU's from the occupied room and making the furnace work much longer.

Hot water heating is a sealed system so you should not expect any leaks. Where the tubing runs through cold areas such as crawl spaces, it would be wise to cover it with pipe insulation.

RETURN DUCTS SUCK AIR

The return ducts which bring warm air back to your furnace to be reheated can suck air in through the seams. If that is happening in cold sections of the house, the warm return air will have to be heated much more at the furnace to bring it up to desired temperature. To avoid this waste of fuel, seal the seams of the return ducts, advises the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

ELECTRIC HEAT IMPROVEMENTS

Although some types of electric resistance heating equipment operate at close to 100 percent efficiency, the high cost of electricity can cause a painful experience when the monthly bill comes in.

To reduce the "high bill" complaints from homeowners who are using electric baseboard or electric furnaces, some utility companies are recommending the installation of electric heat pumps. This type of equipment is much more complicated, but its efficiency can be higher than 100 percent because its compressor extracts some BTU's from the outdoor air.

The Better Heating-Cooling Council has published a series of four factual pamphlets about air-to-air heat pumps which answer many questions for the homeowners. They are: H.P. 1 — "Reliability"; H.P. 2 — "Service-Ability"; H.P. 3 — "Cost of Operation"; and H.P.

4 — "Installation and Comfort".

These are available at 80 cents each, postage free, or all four for $2.50. Send your check to the Better Heating-Cooling Council, P.O. Box 218, Berkeley Heights, N.J. 07922.

For comfort in winter, keep your heating outlets at the outside wall of each room, preferably under the windows, to counteract the cold down-drafts.

If your house has central heating and cooling with air ducts, the supply registers for heated air should be low at the outside walls, while those for cooling should be up near the ceiling, or in the center of the ceiling itself. Using one outlet for both summer and winter will result in poor comfort conditions in either heating or cooling.

IMPROVED OIL BURNERS

Homes heated with oil can achieve significant improvement in fuel efficiency by use of a "flame retention" burner, suggests the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Many old-style burners continue to operate well, so don't pull it out until you have its efficiency tested by a competent oil dealer. The steady-state efficiency should be about 75 percent.

If the instruments show the efficiency of your unit is below 70 percent, find out if it can be improved by cleaning and adjustment. If not, it may be time to consider the new high-efficiency burners.

WET HEAT — HYDRONICS

Hot water heat, the favored system for comfort and economy, uses circulating water from a boiler to bring heat to baseboard units in each room.

It was long known as "wet heat," but that was a misnomer because it is a sealed system and there is no sign of "wetness". The name, Hydronics, has now been in use more than 25 years, and denotes the finest in residential and commercial heating systems.

Old gas furnaces and boilers may benefit by having a vent damper installed in the flue. The amount of fuel reduction will depend on the type of unit you have, and its present efficiency. Ask the gas company or your heating contractor about the advisability of making this improvement.

Just in case there are some of you who think that figure skating ends once the warm weather arrives, you are wrong!

The Wilmington Figure Skating Club, whose home base is the Youth Ice Arena on Upton Court, has many skating members busy with practice, testing to improve their proficiency levels and competing in skating competitions.

The club is proud of the following members who tested and passed the following levels:

Jennifer Armstrong her 6th figure test; Leanne Babine of Tewksbury passed her 3rd figure test and intermediate freestyle test; Yuko Fukuda of Tewksbury passed her 3rd figure test; and Amanda Farkas of Wilmington and Robin Andrews of Reading, passed their preliminary figure tests.

The club is also very proud of its members who entered various skating competitions and the way they showed just how good the Wilmington skaters are. For example: at the Colonial Open Competition, Mari Fukuda of Tewksbury placed first and received a gold medal. Her sister Yuko finished second in her level of competition and brought home a silver medal. Her parents and we are very proud of this exciting pair of skaters. Also placing in their competitive levels were Allison Newton of Andover and Julie Palmquist, also of Andover. Lindsay McCracken of Andover rounded out the group from the Wilmington Figure Skating Club.

Again, in August, our girls traveled to Cohasset to compete in the Cohasset Open. Julie Palmquist of Andover placed second and was awarded a silver medal.

Venture Capital Fair Nov. 3rd

Officials of Bay State industries will meet with representatives of venture capital companies seeking investment opportunities in Massachusetts at the Venture Capital Fair, November 3, at the Marriott Hotel, Newton. The fair is a business service of the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

The business officials will present profiles of their companies and products to representatives of venture capital firms and meet individually with potential investors. The format of the fair permits firms seeking investment capital to make ten-minute presentations to the audience of venture capital companies. The presentations are then followed by small group sessions for further discussion between interested participants.

To participate in the fair, a business must meet the following criteria:

1. Firm is or will be marketing a product.
2. Firm is established (no start-ups) with maturity reflected in the existence of a working business plan and current financial statement.
3. Firm has a potential annual growth rate of 15 percent and an anticipated pre-tax profit margin of 10-15 percent of sales.
4. Firm is seeking capital in the general range of $200,000 to $3,000,000.
5. Firm's basic operations are in Massachusetts.

At latest count, Calvin had studied 71 owner's manuals for new cars, trucks, vans and even a school bus. All by way of research for a nationwide safety program to be launched in September by the Dealers Safety and Mobility Council, an organization of 8,500 new car, truck and tire dealers affiliated with the Federation.

"Other than the Bible, the most widely available book in the world may be the owner's manual found in the glove box of most of the world's 411 million motor vehicles," Calvin says. "The problem is, about half the drivers never bother to read it."

Calvin says that failure to read and follow the manufacturer's recommendations, cautions, and warnings can be costly, and worse yet, dangerous. He estimates that Americans spend about $20 billion on car repair caused by owner neglect, and that failure to follow safety recommendations contributes to traffic accidents.

By DAN KENNEDY

How far would you be willing to go to inherit $10 million? Would you give up all your bad habits? Smoking? Overeating? Drinking and carousing?

That's the question which Rodney Dangerfield has to answer in "Easy Money" (rated R), his new movie and the first one in which he has the starring role.

And his answer, not surprisingly, is the same as the answer you or I might arrive at. For $10 million, he's more than willing to give up his vices, even though it turns him from a fun-loving slob into an uptight, miserable wretch.

"Easy Money," now appearing in a number of local theaters, has been subjected to some inexcusably brutal reviews. Despite the critics' wrath, I thoroughly enjoyed it, and the audience seemed to be having a good time, too.

Remember, you can't always trust what's written by some movie critic with a Ph.D. in Foreign Filmology from Yale. Maybe these critics hate "Easy Money" so much because its slapdash pacing and middle-class humor is such an affront to their would-be sense of sophistication.

Mind you, "Easy Money" is no work of art. But it's billed as a comedy and it makes you laugh. That, at least as I understand it, may be said to constitute a good return on the dollar.

Dangerfield plays a wisecracking children's photographer who's married to the daughter of the imperious matriarch of a clothing store empire. He drinks, he smokes, he gambles and he stays out all hours with his buddies.

Despite his bad habits and low income, his wife, who grew up in luxury, claims to like him just the way he is.

All that changes, however, when her wealthy mother dies. She and Rodney stand to inherit the family's millions — provided that Rodney can reform himself for a full year.

"Easy Money" starts out fast, and the ending, when there are more than a few surprises tossed into the script, is fast. During the middle, though, when Rodney is wrestling with his new, clean lifestyle, things slow down considerably. Mercifully, the beginning and ending more than make up for the middle.

Dangerfield plays his part wisely and well. On television, he's a crazy, wisecracking guy who "gets no respect," and whose bulging eyebrows and facial contortions would lead one to believe his features are made of rubber.

In "Easy Money," he tones all that down so viewers don't go crazy. Ninety minutes of hyperactivity, after all, would wear out any viewer. The facial expressions and one-liners are still there, but he spaces them out for the long haul rather than trying to get all his laughs in five minutes.

The entire cast turns in a decent job, and James Signorelli's direction is workmanlike in its pacing and timing.

Incidentally, whether you like or dislike the movie, you have no one but Dangerfield himself to credit or to blame. He is listed as the principal writer, aided by P.J. O'Rourke of National Lampoon fame, Michael Endler and Dennis Blair.

What "Easy Money" may lack in sophistication, it more than makes up for in genuine laughs. It is definitely one of this year's better comedies.

Study your owner's manual

Want to curl up with a good book? Try your automobile owner's manual, advises Robert M. Calvin, manager of highway safety programs at the Highway Users Federation, who probably has read more of the glove compartment paperbacks than anyone.

At latest count, Calvin had studied 71 owner's manuals for new cars, trucks, vans and even a school bus. All by way of research for a nationwide safety program to be launched in September by the Dealers Safety and Mobility Council, an organization of 8,500 new car, truck and tire dealers affiliated with the Federation.

"Other than the Bible, the most widely available book in the world may be the owner's manual found in the glove box of most of the world's 411 million motor vehicles," Calvin says. "The problem is, about half the drivers never bother to read it."

Calvin says that failure to read and follow the manufacturer's recommendations, cautions, and warnings can be costly, and worse yet, dangerous. He estimates that Americans spend about $20 billion on car repair caused by owner neglect, and that failure to follow safety recommendations contributes to traffic accidents.

The Dealers Council program "Safety Check Your Driving" will be the fourth in a series of audio-visual presentations which Council members loan free of charge to community groups interested in promoting traffic safety. Programs produced earlier deal with drunken and drugged driving and automobile safety maintenance.

"The average automobile has 15,000 parts, 5,000 of which move," Calvin says. "Knowing the location, function, and operation of safety devices, and the procedures to be performed for the safety of the car and its occupants is extremely important, and it's all in the owner's manual. And that manual is in your glovebox."

He said that warnings and cautions about improper procedures which could cause bodily harm are also in the manual, along with tips on how to guard against theft, what to do in case of an emergency, and how to drive for the best fuel efficiency.

"When you buy the car, you've bought the book," says Calvin. "The Dealers program is aimed at getting more people to sit down and read it, then follow its recommendations. That's one homework assignment that might save your life some day."

The "Safety Check Your Driving" program is planned for release in September.

Many, many programs

Eastern Middlesex Red Cross very busy

Your American Red Cross cares about YOU! It provides clothing, food and shelter for victims of disaster; collects life-saving blood for use in area hospitals; schedules screenings and clinics for health awareness; assists families of servicemen in time of emergency; teaches skills that enable one to know what to do when accidents or illness occurs — all this and much more keeps the staff and volunteers of the Eastern Middlesex Red Cross Headquarters busy throughout the year.

Following is a "capsule" report of activities in our communities during the 1982-83 year:

SAFETY SERVICES

The numbers in this service are impressive! 7,649 persons enrolled in 68 courses during the past year. This means your Red Cross has more than one educational course scheduled each week of the year! This would include Standard First Aid, CPR, Race for Life, Water Safety, as well as Recertification and Instructor courses.

In addition, First Aid Stations have been set up at 34 events — including parades, rallies, competitions, fundraisers, and many more locations. 258 volunteers gave a total of 27,139 hours in the Red Cross Safety Service Program.

NURSING AND HEALTH SERVICE

Has a Red Cross volunteer assisted you at a flu immunization clinic? Have you had your blood pressure taken at one of our many bloodmobiles, or at a screening? Has your son or daughter taken a Babysitting course, or received Basic Aid Training as a scout or campfire girl? All of these come under our very active N. & H. Service, which served 565 persons during the past year, thanks to the 50 Red Cross volunteers contributing 606 hours!

SERVICE TO MILITARY FAMILIES AND VETERANS

At present, this service is handled through a central Massachusetts Bay office, but up until January 1, 1983 sixteen loyal volunteers provided night and week-end coverage. In short, 24 hour service was given. If there is a death in the family of a serviceman or woman; if severe illness strikes; if a family is in crisis; if a veteran wishes to upgrade his discharge — your Red Cross is there. Approximately 275 service families and veterans were assisted through this service during the past year.

DISASTER SERVICES

This is one of our mandated services and both staff and volunteers work together to successfully assist victims of disasters. During the past year our Region Disaster team of 15 active volunteers and 6 reserves, responded to 40 residential disaster incidents, 5 commercial and 4 mutual aid calls. 58 families in seven communities were assisted with emergency shelter, food, clothing, furniture, occupational supplies, rent and/or counseling. $6,114 was given in assistance. 1,500 hours were volunteered.

BLOOD SERVICES

If you have never felt the benefits of our other Red Cross services, chances are that you, a family member, or a friend has received a blood transfusion. The Red Cross Blood Service covers all the blood needs of the area hospitals. During the past year, 127 bloodmobiles were scheduled in the seven communities of Eastern Middlesex Region. This represents sites at churches, schools, town halls, businesses, community buildings and chapters. (In short, any place offered to Red Cross which is an appropriate site.) A total 8,449 donors registered at these bloodmobiles and 7,694 units of blood were collected. Over 1,500 volunteers gave approximately 12,625 hours in this service.

COMMUNITY VOLUNTEER SERVICES

This is the most diversified of our Red Cross services, and includes such a range and variety of services that whatever the abilities of a volunteer they can be utilized. During the past year Health Works or Health Fairs have been held in most of the area communities. Your Red Cross has either sponsored, co-sponsored, or assisted with volunteers at these events. Approximately 200 volunteers contributed over 1,500 hours at these health screening sites during the past year.

The Adapted Aquatics Program for special needs adults, at the Melrose YMCA pool, has been most successful. Open to surrounding communities, this program gives those participating the opportunity to benefit not only from supervised exercise, but also from sociability. Eight volunteers contributed over 200 hours.

Through the distribution of federal surplus "butter and cheese," on two separate dates, 282 eligible families representing 625 individuals, as well as nursing homes, day care centers and churches in the area, were supplied with 4,500 lbs. of cheese and 1,368 lbs. of butter. 37 volunteers assisted Red Cross in this distribution — contributing over 150 hours.

"Food Pantry" continues to serve the residents of Melrose.

Twenty volunteers, serving approximately 300 hours, assisted 55 separate families (182 individuals), on one or more occasions during the past year. Monies to support grocery food vouchers, for emergency food needs, are provided through contributions from the churches, Melrose Interfaith, Community Associates, the Metropolitan Bank, and individuals.

Our Transportation Service, for the indigent to medical appointments, involved 296 trips to Boston hospitals, doctors' offices, Veterans Hospital. Fifteen volunteers contributed 865 hours transporting 87 individuals.

Red Cross youth, as well as adults, are active in our Veterans Hospital Program. Assuming responsibility for bringing "cheer" (in the form of refreshments and sociability) to monthly birthday parties, summer picnics, and carnival days, approximately 1,000 young people and 92 adults volunteer their time and efforts. Schools in the area communities, campfire and brownie groups not only respond to the above, but also make holiday favors for patients at the Hospital throughout the year. Letters from patients tell us how much all this is appreciated.

Glaucoma Clinics, completed in Melrose nursing homes, and extending to all the Region communities, will continue through the remainder of 1983 and into 1984. 157 patients in three nursing homes were tested for glaucoma. Eleven volunteers contributed 124 hours.

Varied other activities, including three hearing clinics, six flu immunizations, nine health screenings, holiday assistance to over 80 families, advances to eligible veterans, fundraising activities (swim-a-cross, bridge-a-thons, raffles, concerts, POPS, periodic mailings), all involve many volunteer hours.

In the Eastern Middlesex Region during the past year, over 2,000 volunteers contributed over 50,000 volunteer hours! We are extremely grateful to our volunteers — each and every one of you. Red Cross IS our volunteers!

Morgan Memorial offers 'Styles through the Years'

Ever dreamed about becoming a model?

Morgan Memorial may have the opportunity you've been waiting for — if you enjoy vintage clothes.

"Styles through the Years", Morgan Memorial's popular antique fashion show, is in need of slim male and female models for the fall season. A substitute pianist, who is a good sight reader, and a substitute narrator are also needed. You must provide your own transportation.

Fashions modeled back to 1963 include a Parisian ball gown, Southern Belle dress, Victorian wedding gown, antique bathing suits, antique nightgowns, a turn-of-the-century gymsuit, World War I uniform, Suffragette and Roaring Twenties flapper dresses, all with a colorful array of accessories from parasols to high-button shoes.

The all-volunteer show is presented September through November, and again in the spring, to Temple and church, social, civic and historical groups throughout Greater Boston, the North Shore, South Shore and western suburbs. The show is already booked through the spring of 1984, and bookings are underway for the fall of 1984.

The antique fashion show costs $200, to cover Morgan Memorial's costs, and most groups use it as a fund-raiser by charging their members admission for the evening.

For more information on the antique fashion show — bookings and modeling — contact Rosemary Ross, Director of Volunteer Services at Morgan Memorial, 95 Berkeley Street, Boston, Ma. 02116. Telephone 357-9710, Ext. 245.

As part of the struggle against high prices of all types, a consumers coupon group has been formed calling itself the Coupon Shoppers Club. The purpose of the club is to share with people a way to save from $10 to $25 and more on their weekly shopping bills. This is done by a simple, innovative but previously unused way through the use of coupons. Members of the Coupon Shoppers Club are able to choose the exact coupons desired through a large coupon clearing house. No more searching in vain for coupons for the product preferred.

The Coupon Shoppers Club will have a weekly meeting, that is free and open to everyone, on Wednesdays at the Woburn Holiday Inn, Washington Street Exit, number 38 off Route 128. The time for the meeting will be 7:30 PM.

This is an ideal opportunity for interested couples to be introduced to the socialability of square dancing. Besides being a relatively inexpensive evening's entertainment, square dancing enables a couple to make new friends and acquaintances, and can also be an excellent form of exercise for any age bracket.

Any couple desiring directions or more details may call Lynn and Dick Grant at 664-2169.

Poem

"NIGHT OF TORMENT"
I dragged myself up stair one night and tumbled into bed,
And thanked the Lord above me for my share of daily bread,
And as I lay there dozing in the stillness of my room
A lone mosquito entered with its droning song of doom.
It hummed around my head and ears, all chance of sleep was lost
As in a fit of temper I twisted and I tossed.
All night I fought that demon as I kicked and thrashed about,
I tried to swat the pesky thing — near knocked my poor self out.
I didn't sleep a wink at all, for daylight I did yearn

And swore if morning ever came the worm would surely turn.
I vowed if I could get that pest, I'd hold it by the wing
And tear it limb for limb and then eliminate its sting!
At dawn I got up scratching and believe me I felt mean
Right then I spied the culprit resting on my window screen,
With one mad swipe I conquered it, its torturing did cease
And I climbed back in bed again to finally rest in peace!

Choosing pesticides

Choosing a pesticide should be a decision many gardeners need to make only once. Good control of garden pests can best be obtained by using one of the many all-purpose pesticides available at garden centers. Such formulations are designed to kill a broad spectrum of insects and diseases. Those suited for use by home gardeners are labeled for most fruits, vegetables and ornamentals around the home and are found in liquid concentrates, wettable powders and dusts.

Most of these sprays or dusts contain two or more insecticides, one or more fungicides and quite often a miticide as well. When choosing, look for one that will deliver control of the most insects and diseases, on the most plants, with the least toxicity. When applying pesticides, always follow the directions and precautions on the label. Remember to include the undersides of the leaves, and apply in the early morning or in the evening when the temperature is cooler and honeybee activity is minimal.

If you need more specific information on pesticides or application, contact the Middlesex County Extension Service Horticulture Department, 105 Everett St., Concord, Ma. 01742.

NOW ON SALE!! Only $13.95 per yd. PINE AND HEMLOCK BARK MULCH

3 yd. minimum - small del. charge

Fall mulching your garden will inhibit weed growth - keep your soil loose and workable for spring planting - add nutrients to the soil and beauty to the area - 4-5 inch thickness is recommended. Bark mulch built up around evergreens and bushes helps prevent winter kill in sub-zero winter weather.
